2 Pre-Trial Chamber I - Courtroom 2
3 Presiding Judge Sanji Mmasenono Monageng, Judge Sylvia Steiner,
4 and Judge Cuno Tarfusser
5 Situation in the Democratic Republic of Congo - ICC-01/04-01/10
6 In the case of the Prosecutor versus Callixte Mbarushimana
7 Confirmation of Charges Hearing
8 Tuesday, 20 September 2011
9 The hearing starts at 9.09 a.m.
10 (Open session)
11 COURT USHER: All rise. The International Criminal Court is now
12 in session. Please be seated.
13 COURT OFFICER: Good morning, your Honours, Madam President. We 14 are in open session.
15 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Good morning, everybody.
16 Court Officer, please read the case out.
17 COURT OFFICER: Situation in the Democratic Republic of the 18 Congo, in the case of the Prosecutor versus Callixte Mbarushimana, case 19 reference ICC-01/04-01/10.
20 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you.
21 The composition of the Chamber remains the same, and I will now 22 invite the Prosecution to inform us of any changes in their composition.
23 MR. STEYNBERG: Good morning, Madam President, your Honours. The 24 Prosecution team is the same as it was yesterday.
25 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you very much.

1 Legal Representatives, please.

2 Mr. Kaufman for the Defence.

3 MR. KAUFMAN: Good morning, Madam President, your Honours. There 4 is, of course, one new face this morning on the Defence team. It is my 5 privilege to introduce Professor Kai Ambos, Professor of Law at Göttingen 6 University and judge of the German Provincial Court. Thank you.

7 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you very much.

8 This morning we will continue with the presentation by the 9 Defence and I must say that yesterday you used one hour of your 10 entitlement, and if you are going to use all your time, we will go on to 11 3.00, 3.00 p.m. You have five hours left. Thank you.

12 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you, Madam President.

13 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: You can go ahead, Mr. Kaufman.

14 MR. KAUFMAN: When Court adjourned yesterday, I was in the middle 15 of analysing the incident at Kipopo. I had analysed the Human Rights 16 Watch reports and I then turned to the other items of evidence in the 17 Prosecution's list of evidence which are brought in support of this 18 incident. And I said that similarly to Human Rights Watch, there were 19 equally unreliable media reports issued by Radio Okapi. On February the 20 17th, 2009, this radio station reported that the FDLR had killed 14 21 people at Kipopo. I refer the learned Pre-Trial Chamber to 22 DRC-OTP-2038-0029.

23 Two days later, however, on the 19th of February, 2009, this very 24 same radio station was reporting the number of civilian dead at Kipopo as 25 13, a discrepancy of one body. Once again I'm forced to ask myself

1 whether one of these individuals had been miraculously resurrected. Of 2 course I do not mean to make light of these matters, but I do stress that 3 without a proper explanation of the methodology used by various human 4 rights bodies, especially Human Rights Watch, very little weight, if at 5 all, should be attached to their statistical conclusions and their 6 imputations of liability.

7 In the first Radio Okapi report mention is made of the fact that 8 people were shot as well as burned, which just brings me back to what 9 Prosecution Witness 544 said about the attack on Kipopo, namely, that it 10 was a military operation. And I ask: How has the Prosecution made you 11 sure, even on substantial grounds, that the people who died were indeed 12 civilians and civilians who did not die as part of collateral damage 13 involved in attacking a village with incendiary devices such as mortar 14 and machine-gun fire.

15 The fact that Kipopo was a purely military operation is 16 corroborated by Witness 677, who states that it was a locality which 17 served as the base for a Mayi-Mayi unit which had attacked a company 18 within the FDLR called Zodiac -- a company within the FDLR. According to 19 Witness 677, the attack on Kipopo would have been spontaneous. He heard
20 no messages - and don't forget, (Expunged)- from FOCA 21 command concerning Kipopo and he heard nothing about civilians being 22 killed. That's to be found at DRC-OTP-2038-0049 at paragraph 87. That 23 is my analysis of Kipopo.

24 However, before I turn to the next locality mentioned in the 25 document containing the charges, I would like to take a break, with your

1 Honours' permission, and invite Professor Ambos to make his intervention 2 on the mode of liability. I hope that will cause no inconvenience to the 3 Chamber. I do apologise, but this is the way we had intended originally 4 that Professor Ambos would appear first today, but then yesterday the 5 Prosecution finished before time so I had initiate. I hope that's no 6 problem. Does that meet with your Honours' approval?

7 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Yes, sir.

8 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you very much.

9 So at this point in time, it is my privilege to defer to 10 Professor Kai Ambos.

11 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: May I make just one small 12 intervention. You are actually entitled to go up to 3.30, not 3.00.

13 MR. KAUFMAN: 3.30?

14 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: That's your five hours.

15 MR. KAUFMAN: I shall endeavour to do so.

16 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you.

17 MR. AMBOS: Good morning, Madam President, honourable Judges of 18 this Court. It's a great honour for me to stand here before this Court, 19 which I strongly support, as you know from my writings and other 20 activities. Let me just explain why I'm standing here. I'm here because 21 when I received a phone call by Mr. Kaufman one week ago, more or less, I 22 looked at the document of charges of the Prosecution and, having read 23 this document, I came to the conclusion that the Prosecution is starting 24 from a flawed legal interpretation of the mode of liability which is the 25 core of this case, i.e., Article 25, para 3, subparagraph (d) of the

1 Rome Statute. I also decided to intervene, since this is the first case, 2 the first confirmation hearing, where this provision will be the object 3 of analysis, i.e., in other words, the Court will set the precedent which 4 is very important for the future international criminal law and it's very 5 important, I shall add, for the legitimacy of this Court.

6 My presentation will be divided into three sections. First of 7 all, I will make some general remarks on the genesis of this subparagraph
8 (d). I will then try to delimitate subparagraph (d) from subparagraph 9 (a) and subparagraph (c) of Article 25, para 3, in order to then - and 10 that will be the most important part and the main part of my 11 presentation - apply subparagraph (d) to the charges before us.

12 I will not talk about evidence here. I will make a strict legal 13 analysis, taking into account the Prosecution case, i.e., the case as it 14 was presented by the document of charges and as it was a little bit 15 amended, I must say, in Friday's and yesterday's hearing. I have studied 16 carefully the transcripts and I will explain to you why I think that this 17 case has a little bit shifted.

18 So let me start with my introductory remarks. As you know, 19 Article 25(3)(d) of the Rome Statute was a compromise when we negotiated 20 this provision in Rome and I was part of the German delegation in Rome 21 and I was participating in the working group of general principals which 22 negotiated, among others, this provision. It represents a compromise 23 between those States' delegations which tried to oppose or opposed any 24 form of anticipated or organisational/collective responsibility and it 25 tried to strike a compromise between this position and the position of 1 other State Parties which tried to involve some collective element in 2 Article 25(3). Still, this compromise resulted in a provision which 3 *focus -- which stresses the individual participations, the individual 4 contribution of the person which in any way may be linked to a common 5 plan, a common criminal purpose. This was the interpretation which was 6 deemed then in Rome in 1998 in accordance with general principles of 7 criminal law, especially the principle of culpability and the principle 8 of legality.

9 In concrete terms this means the following as to other forms of 10 liability which we well know from our national criminal law. First, 11 subparagraph (d) of Article 25 does not encompass any form of conspiracy, 12 in other words, to make this very clear, it does not encompass any form 13 of anticipated liability where the meeting of minds without any further 14 action with regard to the commission of crimes is punishable. This has 15 been clearly excluded. It was not so that we did not have any precedent.
16 We had from the Statute of the International Military Tribunal of 17 Nuremberg, for example, the conspiracy provision. But it was a conscious 18 decision of the drafters to limit subparagraph (d) to an individual 19 contribution to a crime or at least an attempted crime, an attempted 20 crime.

21 Secondly, equally, subparagraph (d) does not criminalise - does 22 not criminalise - mere membership in a criminal or terrorist 23 organisation. This form of organisational responsibility, which also can 24 be found in Article 10 of the Statute of the International Military 25 Tribunal of Nuremberg, was also rejected consciously by the drafters.

1 Indeed, the drafters of the Statute clearly opted for a model of 2 individual responsibility, individual - I must stress it - individual 3 responsibility, i.e., a model of imputation, whereby the individual 4 contribution, the individual contribution, to a criminal result is the 5 indispensable prerequisite of any kind of criminal liability.

6 I just want to remind the honourable Judges of this Court that 7 our national laws, the laws of Brazil, the laws of Botswana, the laws of 8 Italy and obviously the laws of Germany, the law of Israel and many other 9 laws *provide for membership liability. In my written 10 submissions, which you will receive as part of the final submissions of 11 the Defence, you will find all the references. But it is not the case of 12 this Court, we do not have membership responsibility in this Court.

13 Third, as to joint criminal enterprise, the joint criminal 14 enterprise doctrine as developed by the Tadic Appeals Chamber of the 15 International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia, this means 16 that it can only be compared to subparagraph (d) as far as subparagraph
17 (d) speaks of a common purpose element. And this is what the Lubanga 18 confirmation decision said. It is not what my esteemed colleague 19 Ms. Solano said yesterday. I quote from the transcript, page 42, line 11
20 and 12 that the Lubanga confirmation decision in paragraph 337 said.

21 "... common purpose is a residual form of accessory 22 liability ..."

23 The Lubanga confirmation decision did not say "common purpose."

24 You can go to paragraph 337, it says subparagraph (d) is a 25 residual form of liability.

1 Now, what we can see here and we come back to it, the Prosecution
2 tries to depict subparagraph (d) as a form of common purpose liability.
3 It is misrepresenting the only *case of this Court which refers to 4 subparagraph (d), the only *case in confirmation decision, I'm not 5 referring to arrest warrant decisions. The only *case. It is not talking 6 about common purpose. The Lubanga confirmation decision does not even 7 mention the word "common purpose," speaking about subparagraph (d).

8 And that means, as I have explained elsewhere and as the Chamber, 9 the honourable Chamber, has to make clear in this confirmation decision, 10 that again - I repeat to make this crystal clear - as to joint criminal 11 enterprise, the only relationship between subparagraph (d) and this form 12 of -- this mode of liability is the mentioning of a common purpose 13 element, but it is not at all structurally comparable with the collective 14 tendency of joint criminal enterprise, stressing the common purpose. In 15 this case, the Prosecution of this Court would be right, but we are not 16 here in the ICTY, we are in the ICC. And we are not applying the ICTY 17 case law and we are not applying the ICTY Statute.

18 And also there is another point which cannot be underestimated.
19 You cannot just talk about joint criminal enterprise. You must 20 distinguish between the three -- yes, I speak a little bit slower. Thank 21 you very much.

22 You must distinguish between the three forms of joint criminal 23 enterprise, and if you look at the doctrine and the literature, and only 24 the literature the doctrine has written about, there is no case law of 25 this Court. That may be the first important case here to be decided.

1 There is a general agreement, if you look at Schabas, if you look at the 2 Cassese commentary, if you look at other writers, Héctor Olásolo I may 3 quote here, that the Joint Criminal Enterprise III liability, which 4 implies a lower mental standard, i.e., foreseeability and dolus
5 eventualis, according to the case law of the ICTY, for this very reason 6 cannot be applied under subpara (d). Because, as we shall see later, 7 subpara (d) requires intent, yeah, intent, and that is obviously a higher 8 standard than the recklessness/negligence standard applied under Joint 9 Criminal Enterprise III.

10 For these reasons, the Prosecution approach which has been really 11 stressed in these transcripts, more than in the document of charges, to 12 interpret subparagraph (d) as a form of common purpose liability - you 13 can read this all over the transcript if you read from pages 33 on - is 14 utterly flawed. It is utterly flawed because it was not the intention of 15 the drafters and it does not go with the wording of subparagraph (d).

16 Now, what does this mean as regards the delimitation of 17 subparagraph (d) with respect to subparagraph (a) and (c)? As to 18 subparagraph (e) (* sic), which contains three forms of perpetration, and 19 the relevant form here is co-perpetration, it is clear that the 20 difference between subparagraph (e) (* sic) and subparagraph (d) lies on 21 the objective threshold, on the relevant objective threshold. This 22 Court, this Court, in all its case law up to now applies the theory of 23 control of the act, and for co-perpetration this means that a 24 co-perpetrator must make a substantial, indispensable, essential 25 contribution which -- whose omission would frustrate the commission of 1 the crime.

2 In our case, obviously, this same Pre-Trial Chamber in its arrest 3 warrant decision has rejected such a contribution and has therefore 4 rejected the application of subparagraph (a). And I can therefore come 5 to subparagraph (c). I just make this distinction to make clear the 6 relationship in paragraph 3 of Article 25 of the different forms of 7 participation.

8 Subparagraph 3 is the form of assistance to a crime, to an 9 individual crime, we have introduced in the Rome Statute and which speaks 10 of assistance -- assists in its commission or its attempted commission, 11 and requires also contribution. The contribution required under 12 subparagraph (c) has not been defined by this Court. However, if you 13 look at the case law - and in this case we can legitimately look at the 14 case law of the ad hoc tribunals - a contribution in the sense of 15 assistance, aiding and abetting, has been defined as a substantial 16 contribution and this interpretation in the Tadic decision I just *quoted, 17 if the criminal act most probably would not have occurred in the same way 18 had not someone acted in the role that the accused in fact assumed, this 19 interpretation of contribution also must be applied to subparagraph (c).
20 This is just not academic because we have to interpret - and I come back 21 to this later - what does "contribution" under subparagraph (d) mean, and 22 therefore we have first to make clear what "assistance" within the 23 meaning of subparagraph (c) means.

24 Obviously the most important difference between subparagraph (c)
25 and subparagraph (d) is the higher subjective threshold of subparagraph

1 (c) "for the purpose of facilitating" and this is the essential 2 difference between subparagraph (c) and subparagraph (d), where we only 3 require an intent.

4 Now, let me now apply subparagraph (d) to the case before us.
5 Let me first say or remind the honourable Chamber that number 48 of the 6 regulations for the Prosecution call upon the Prosecution to clearly 7 define the mode of liability which it deems appropriate to tackle the 8 alleged conduct. The clarity and precision of the charges is a question 9 of fairness to the accused and has been widely recognised in the case law 10 of the ad hoc tribunals. Certainly, this Court will not want to lag 11 behind the ad hoc tribunals in terms of fairness to the accused.
12 Unfortunately, the charging in the present case taken from the document 13 containing the charges and from the presentations on Friday and on Monday 14 create problems of fairness, create problems of fairness.

15 The Prosecution now, quite straightforwardly, focuses on 16 subparagraph (d) of Article 25(3), but it fails to provide a clear and 17 traceable argumentation to substantiate that the conduct in question 18 meets all the legal elements of subparagraph (d). This is for an 19 external observer, like myself, quite clear reading the document of 20 charges and making a point-to-point analysis of the elements of subpara 21 (d) to our case. The document of charges, after identifying the 22 circumstances under which alleged war crimes and crimes against humanity 23 have been committed, directly proceeds to the objective requirement of "a 24 group of persons acting with a common purpose." The group element in 25 this definition has already addressed by Mr. Kaufman on Friday.

1 Obviously if a group exists depends on the definition of the group, how 2 many members such a group may have, and it depends on the actual 3 composition of the leadership of the FDLR as to the common purpose, which 4 is my main concern part of this definition.

5 I would now like the Court Officer to show the chart the Defence
6 sent to the Court.

7 COURT OFFICER: The document is available on your screens by 8 pressing the button "PC 1" and in your screens the button "Select/1-2."
9 This is a public document.

10 MR. AMBOS: So what I have tried with this document, I have tried 11 to disentangle the complex common purpose creation which the Prosecution 12 in the document containing the charges presented to this honourable 13 Court.

14 Yeah, it could be reduced maybe a little bit more, that you can 15 see the -- at least -- yeah, that's okay. It's better now.

16 As to common purpose, the Prosecution, as you can see from this 17 chart - based, I repeat, on the document of charges - creates a complex 18 three-level common purpose system. First, an overall common purpose 19 which I call for the sake of convenience Common Purpose "A" which 20 basically exists in the extortion of political power in Rwanda in 21 exchange for ceasing atrocities against civilians, i.e., which is, one 22 could say, the political project of the FDLR and which is obviously a 23 non-criminal common purpose. And then two sub or minor common purposes, 24 one which I call here Common Purpose "B" which is the common purpose, 25 which, by the way, also is a main object of a case in Germany which takes

1 place at the moment, and which refers to the creation of a humanitarian 2 catastrophe and the relevant part in criminal terms, the underlying acts, 3 attacks against the civilian population and so on. This is Common 4 Purpose "B." And a second sub-common purpose, which is the conduct of an 5 international media campaign, Common Purpose "C."

6 Now, as you can see, unfortunately, I do not have a pointer to 7 make this clear as in the lecture room, as you can see from the arrows I 8 have put into this chart, there is a relationship, according to the 9 Prosecution case, between Common Purpose "C" and the overall common 10 purpose. I am aware that the Prosecution changed this focus - I will 11 come back to this - during this hearing which for me is a problem of 12 fairness, by the way, because I had then this night to work very hard to 13 get this right here, two days ago, one day ago, changing the Prosecution 14 case. I will come back to this. But as to the document containing the 15 charges, the Prosecution links Common Purpose "C," let's call it the 16 media campaign purpose, to Common Purpose "A," let's call it the 17 political purpose, yeah, the political power purpose or something. But 18 both of these purposes are not criminal. It is not criminal to make 19 propaganda - I will come back to this - even if it's propaganda with 20 regard to international crimes, denying international crimes. And it's 21 obviously not criminal that a political group wants to gain power.

22 The only criminal purpose -- or to be more precise, that's very 23 important in this case, the only common purpose which has criminal 24 elements in this case is Common Purpose "B." And the criminal elements 25 in this case of Common Purpose "B" is not the humanitarian catastrophe,

1 as was made clear, by the way, in the German case, it's very clear, it's 2 not criminal as such because a humanitarian catastrophe could be caused 3 by nature, not necessarily by human beings. It's not as such criminal, 4 but the acts which allegedly led to this humanitarian catastrophe, here 5 is a criminal element. In other words, to make a case against 6 Mr. Mbarushimana, his concrete acts, his concrete acts, must be linked to 7 Common Purpose "B" and, to be more precise, to the underlying acts of 8 Common Purpose "B."

9 Well, we have a problem here. According to the Prosecution - as 10 confirmed by Madam Deputy Prosecutor, Fatou Bensouda, last Friday, 11 Mr. Mbarushimana is a leading member of the FDLR. And we can see this 12 all over the documents of the Prosecution case. They use the word 13 "linchpin," "linchpin." That means that Mr. Mbarushimana, if I followed 14 this argument, is part of the common purpose. He is part of the inner 15 circle of power of FDLR, following the Prosecution case, following the 16 Prosecution case. Well, this creates a big problem with regard to 17 subparagraph (d). Why?

18 Subparagraph (d), as I already said at the beginning of my 19 presentation, is a form of accomplice or accessory liability and does, in 20 contrast to subparagraph (a), the forms of perpetration, is intended to 21 cover those persons who do not, not, belong to the inner circle of the 22 common purpose or, for that matter, the criminal enterprise. Actually, 23 the Prosecution takes the same view. I think Ms. Solano correctly 24 pointed out in this chart, and also you can read it in the transcript, 25 that common purpose - obviously common purpose is not the subpara (d) but

1 anyway - does not require showing that the person is a member of the 2 group that commits the crime. I'm quoting the Prosecution. I'm quoting 3 the Prosecution. Yeah.

4 So what the Prosecution says are two things which are 5 inconsistent and cannot be reconciled. Let me just make very clear this 6 legal point here. Subparagraph (d) does not refer to persons belonging 7 to the inner circle. Who has said it, by the way, in our field was 8 Professor Cassese, I have the reference here, and I think the 9 interpretation of Professor Cassese, which is, I think, beyond 10 controversy in this Court because it was actually taken -- adopted by the 11 Prosecution, as I just showed, is based on a systematic interpretation of 12 subparagraph (d) with regard to subparagraph (a) in particular, and 13 therefore it is important to see all the subparagraphs of paragraph (3).
14 That's why I started with subparagraph (a) and subparagraph (c).

15 Let me just repeat this point because it's a very important point 16 and it seems to me a legal point which must be addressed by this Chamber.

17 Subparagraph (e) -- sorry, subparagraph (a) refers to 18 responsibility as a perpetrator in the form of co-perpetration, yeah, one 19 of the three forms contained in subparagraph (a), it is required that 20 there is an agreement between the co-perpetrators, i.e., that these 21 co-perpetrators form the inner circle. They are really the guys who 22 control the criminal acts.

23 Subparagraph (d), in contrast, is a form of residual, subsidiary, 24 accessory liability, which has been introduced into the Statute for those 25 cases in which a person contributes to a criminal enterprise, to a common

1 purpose, without being member of this very common purpose. And 2 therefore, Cassese's argument is correct. And the distinction between 3 belonging to the inner circle and not belonging to the inner circle is a 4 crucial distinction in the delimitation of subpara (d) from subpara (a).

5 But this would mean, and that is the end of the Prosecution case, 6 that if Mr. Mbarushimana belongs to the inner circle of FDLR, as always 7 has been stated here by the Prosecution, he cannot be responsible under 8 subparagraph (d). He cannot be responsible under subparagraph (d). This 9 inconsistency in the Prosecution case which is obvious and which cannot 10 be reconciled with the interpretation, the same interpretation the 11 Prosecution gives of subparagraph (d). You don't even have to refer to 12 Cassese and other academics. We only have to read the Prosecution's 13 submissions, and the Prosecution interprets subpara (d) as requiring that 14 the person does not belong to the inner circle. But Mr. Mbarushimana, 15 according to the Prosecution, belongs to the inner circle. I do not know 16 how they want to square this circle. I don't understand it 17 intellectually.

18 But let's, for the sake of argument, just interpret subparagraph 19 (d) in a more broader, broader, form. I recognise that we are here a 20 little bit in a creation phase of international criminal law because this 21 Court has not yet dealt with subparagraph (d) and the academic sources 22 are very scarce. So let us just think, for the sake of argument, that 23 subparagraph (d) does not require anything with regard to the inner 24 circle, i.e., that it is -- can be understood in an expansive, extensive 25 way, so as to include also persons who belong to the inner circle, yeah.

1 I mean, one could argue, just for the sake of argument, also as an 2 academic, that subparagraph (d) would be meaningless if we interpret it, 3 as done by the Prosecution and as done by Cassese, requiring that the 4 person does not belong to the inner circle, as actually this case shows.
5 And therefore, we may just make a broader interpretation of subparagraph
6 (d) and say: Okay, we apply subparagraph (d) to any person who fulfils 7 the legal requirements of subpara (d) independent, independent, of its 8 relationship with the inner circle of the common purpose of the group.
9 That would be a broader interpretation.

10 But even if one follows this broader what I would call ratione
11 personae interpretation of subparagraph (d), in my modest opinion it 12 cannot -- in my modest opinion it cannot be applied in this case.

13 So let me analyse in detail now the elements of subparagraph (d).
14 Subparagraph (d) requires, apart from its group common purpose element 15 which we already dealt with, a contribution to an attempted crime and 16 this contribution has to be intentional. Consequently, a two-fold 17 objective/subjective nexus contribution intention must connect the 18 alleged contribution to the alleged criminal results.

19 What now is the accused's -- the suspect's, sorry, the suspect's 20 contribution according to the Prosecution case? According to the 21 document of charges, his contribution was exclusively directed towards 22 the implementation of common purpose "C" if I may direct your attention 23 to my chart, yeah, it was exclusively to common purpose "C," i.e., to 24 conduct an international media campaign. However, this conduct, to 25 conduct an international media campaign, does not, does not - even in the 1 view of the most extensive interpretation of the relevant 2 provision - constitute a crime under the ICC's Statute nor does any of 3 the suspect's concrete activities mentioned in the document containing 4 the charges. In fact, what is said here in the document containing of 5 charges is, in my very direct words, is that the suspect was or is the 6 propaganda minister of FDLR. He was a front man in terms of propaganda.

7 Now, let me just remind you of one very important precedent which 8 must be quoted here, and that is a case of Hans Fritzsche, Hans Fritzsche, 9 the former head of the news division of the Nazi's propaganda ministry 10 led by Josef Göbbels. Not that I want to make any parallels here to 11 the -- between the Nazis and the FDLR, but for obvious reasons I must 12 quote this case because the only precedent in international law which 13 refers to case where we had a similar situation is this case. I'm not 14 referring to the media case of the Rwanda Tribunal, for example, because 15 it is different in the sense that in this case we were dealing with 16 incitement to genocide, yeah. It is very clear that the only form where 17 denial, Holocaust denial, negacionismo, what in many of our criminal laws 18 is criminal is punishable under international order the only, only, way 19 is incitement to genocide, but incitement to genocide is not the object 20 of this case.

21 In the case of Hans Fritzsche, the Nuremberg Tribunal, the 22 International Tribunal said -- Hans Fritzsche was absolved. He was not 23 convicted, he was absolved, and I give you the most important quote of 24 the IMT in this case.

25 With regard to war crimes and crimes against humanity, I quote:

1 "... the Tribunal is not prepared to hold that they, *[the Nazi 2 propaganda statements of Fritsche] were intended to incite the German 3 people to commit atrocities on conquered peoples and he cannot be held to 4 have been a participant in the crimes charged. His aim, his aim, was 5 rather, to arouse popular sentiment in support of Hitler and the German 6 war effort."

7 Now in this case, I repeat, Mr. Fritsche, which for many of the 8 (* indiscernible), like my father, of the German time was the number one 9 Nazi propaganda chief, the number one Nazi propaganda chief, and many 10 Germans did not understand why he was absolved. He was absolved with 11 this reasoning of the International Military Tribunal.

12 In any case, given that the Prosecution is not able to prove a 13 relevant direct impact of the accused's contribution on the war crimes
14 and crimes against humanity allegedly committed under Common Purpose "B," 15 I now come back to common purpose "B," humanitarian catastrophe
16 underlying crimes. If one reads the document containing the charges, I 17 cannot find any evidence in this document, the Prosecution constructs 18 this, on my chart presented, complex common purpose pyramid, trying to 19 forward Mbarushimana's contribution formed Common Purpose "C," which is 20 his actual contribution. I think it's not in dispute, propaganda, 21 statements, press declarations, forwards this common purpose - which, I 22 repeat, is not criminal, it is not criminal - via Common Purpose "A," the 23 overall common purpose, the political common purpose, to common purpose 24 "B."

25 Obviously the Prosecution is aware - and this is clear from the

1 statements especially by my esteemed colleague Ms. Solano
2 yesterday - that it must link the suspect to common purpose "B." It must 3 link the suspect to common purpose "B." And this is a reason why the 4 Prosecution now - not in the document of containing the charges but now 5 in this confirmation hearing - comes up with a new focus, which is that 6 Mr. Mbarushimana encouraged - yeah, they use the word
7 "encouragement" - the common purpose "B" without, however, clearly 8 distinguishing between the general common purpose "B," which is a 9 humanitarian catastrophe, and the underlying crimes. And the only, only 10 relevant thing in this case, again, I repeat it, I insist, is whether 11 this Chamber finds with the standard of the confirmation hearing that 12 Mr. Mbarushimana can be linked using subparagraph (d) to the crimes 13 committed within the framework, the alleged crimes committed within the 14 framework, of common purpose "B."

15 Now, what exactly requires subparagraph (d) if we analyse it 16 point by point? Subparagraph (d), first of all, requires on an objective 17 level a contribution, a contribution. For this very fact, I repeat, 18 subparagraph (d) is not common purpose liability or so the word "common 19 purpose" is part of the wording, but it's not only part of the wording.
20 We have put into subparagraph (d) the word "contribution" to make clear 21 that subparagraph (d) in the whole structure of our Article 25, paragraph 22 (3) is another form of individual responsibility.

23 Let me quote just to make clear how misconceived the 24 Prosecution's position is on this point. From yesterday's transcript, 25 page 42, 43, lines 23 and following, Ms. Solano said:

1 "Also the requirement of common purpose," she's speaking all the 2 time of common purpose as if we were in the Yugoslav Tribunal, "unless 3 onerous then other modes of liability in this respect we submit, we 4 submit, it is a fundamental tool for addressing crimes committed by 5 international criminal organisations," when I read that I thought: What 6 is she talking about? I'm sorry.

7 Article 25, paragraph (3), subparagraph (d), according to the 8 Prosecution's submission, is a tool to fight international criminal 9 organisations. I remember very well when we had a meeting with the 10 Brazilian delegation, among others, in Rome and the Brazilians wanted to 11 include the responsibility of legal persons, i.e., collective entities, 12 in the Rome Statute, and it was clearly rejected by the States. We're 13 always talking here about individual criminal responsibility. It is 14 plainly wrong, with all due respect to the Prosecution, that anything, 15 anything in this Statute is a tool to fight international criminal 16 organisations. This Statute is directed towards individuals, not towards 17 organisations.

18 And then Ms. Solano goes on and quotes the post-World War II law 19 by the Nuremberg Tribunal and domestic courts. She says:

20 "These theories," i.e., the theories of Nuremberg and subsequent 21 theories, it's on page 43 above, "made it possible to prosecute war 22 criminals who contribute to the commission of crimes through diverse 23 means." Well, these theories made it possible, yes, that was the 24 theories of Nuremberg. When we made the Rome Statute we wanted to 25 distance ourselves from Nuremberg. We did not want to include conspiracy

1 and we did not want to include organisational membership responsibility.
2 Though the Nuremberg precedent does not serve any purpose here, it serves 3 the purpose to clearly show that this Court, due to its respect for the 4 principle of culpability *or personal responsibility, is focusing on 5 personal individual contributions and not in any form on collective 6 responsibility.

7 Well, what then does mean contribution? Contribution, there are 8 two issues here with regard to contribution. One issue is the nature of 9 the contribution and the second issue is what we could call the relevance 10 or the impact of a contribution to the main crime. As to the nature of 11 the contribution, Ms. Solano yesterday made a point in her presentation 12 here on this chart but also in the transcript, it says common purpose 13 does not require the commission of acts that are criminal in nature. I 14 had some problems to understand this, what she wanted to say. I looked 15 at the transcript and what she wants to say is that the contribution not 16 necessarily must be unlawful. That's my interpretation. I hope I do not 17 misrepresent the Prosecution. I think you cannot draw this from here, 18 but if you read the transcript, that is clear.

19 I would agree with the Prosecution. The contribution as such in 20 subparagraph (d) is neutral, is neutral, but this brings us to a very 21 big, great doctrinal problem. And if the Court considers that the 22 contribution can be neutral -- no, let's make this clear with a case. I 23 could sell food to a concentration camp, as happened in many German 24 cases. This selling of food is a neutral act, is an economic activity.
25 It is not unlawful to sell food. Now, obviously selling food to a

1 concentration camp makes this concentration camp functioning. Without 2 food they could not kill, torture, so on. Now the question is, the 3 doctrinal question - which, by the way, has been dealt with in Spain, in 4 Brazil, in Colombia, in Germany, in Italy, if neutral acts, neutral acts, 5 neutral acts contributions to a criminal enterprise, for example, running 6 of a concentration camp, are criminal or not criminal. It is not in 7 dispute, and in this the Prosecution is right, that the contribution per 8 se must not be unlawful. It could be lawful. But the question is if a 9 lawful contribution with the doctrine in these countries I just mentioned 10 call neutral acts must be criminalised, and it is highly disputed. We 11 cannot go into this here because this would really take me two or three 12 hours to explain, but what I want to make clear here, if the Chamber take 13 the view that the contribution can be lawful, in other words, any 14 contribution under subparagraph (d) could fulfil the requirements of the 15 concept of contribution, it has to go into this discussion which we have 16 in our national systems about the criminality of neutral acts. There is 17 also a famous Dutch case, the van Anraat case, which comes close to this 18 issue. So this is a big problem which will be opened if one takes this 19 view.

20 The second element of the contribution, the impact or the 21 relevance of the contribution.

22 Now, if you remember, I have said that the contribution, the 23 assistance, under subparagraph (c) must be substantial. Admittedly, 24 there is no case law of this Court on this question, but the overwhelming 25 doctrine interpreting assistance within the meaning of the case law of

1 the ad hoc tribunals, because it's the same wording, has interpreted that 2 the contribution must be essential, significant, important, relevant.

3 Now, according to the Prosecution - again, this chart and the 4 transcript - a contribution within the meaning of subparagraph (d) must 5 not be essential, must not be essential. I wonder if this can be 6 correct. If we look at the wording of subparagraph (d) and compare it to 7 subparagraph (c) as to the objective element, yeah, I'm talking only 8 about the actus reus about the contribution, subparagraph (c) speaks of 9 aids, abets, or otherwise assists, otherwise assists. This is the 10 important part, otherwise assists. While subparagraph (d) says "in any 11 other way contributes ..." I ask the honourable Judges, is there a 12 difference between "otherwise assists" and "in any other way 13 contributes."

14 According to the Prosecution, the contribution could be any 15 contribution. I must ask even an irrelevant contribution, I wonder.
16 Because if they say it must not be -- it need not be essential, as 17 yesterday, the question is: But what then, what kind of contribution do 18 we need for subparagraph (d)? So my argument would be, I would not see a 19 difference between the contribution necessary for subparagraph (c), given 20 that the wording of subparagraph (d) and subparagraph (d) is basically 21 the same. We can compare the French, Spanish, Arabic, Chinese, and 22 Russian versions and we may find even a closer wording. So there cannot 23 be reasonably a difference between the contribution used in subparagraph 24 (c) and subparagraph (d).

25 And there is another argument or two arguments which support this

1 conclusion which are very important.

2 The arguments refer to fundamental principles guiding the law of 3 this Court. The first is the principle of culpability, which I do not 4 need to explain here, but which obviously requires that there must be 5 some contribution, there must be some impact of the contribution as to 6 the alleged crimes if we want to declare a person culpable, guilty, 7 before this Court. And the second one refers to the policy choices this 8 Court, this Statute, and this very Prosecution takes if its focuses on 9 cases of a certain gravity.

10 The gravity element in this Court is obvious. It comes up in the 11 preamble, it comes up in Article 17, complementarity, paragraph 1, 12 subparagraph (d); and it comes up four times, four times, in Article 53.
13 And obviously this Prosecution, in the strategy paper they put out on the 14 internet, takes gravity as a very important starting point.

15 Gravity, however, also refers to the mode of liability, not only 16 to the crime. So one could question at all if a person who may only at 17 best be a contributor within the meaning of subparagraph (d), basically a 18 propaganda man, that this person should be before this Court and should 19 not be left, for example, to the national jurisdictions in terms of 20 gravity.

21 In any case, if we use gravity as a policy element in the -- in 22 this Court, this means that we should also apply, interpret restrictively 23 the forms of liability, the modes of liability. It is not -- one could 24 also say we need a grave contribution, yeah. If we take the idea of 25 gravity, which is in this Statute at various times, to the mode of 1 liability we could say that at least the contribution must be grave and 2 not irrelevant.

3 And then there is still a further argument which is a little bit 4 more doctrinal, but please excuse me if I make these little * ex cursus 5 arguments because it is important and it has been relevant in this 6 Court.

7 Why should we interpret restrictively the word "contribution"?
8 What is required for criminal responsibility in any criminal law system 9 which considers itself a fair law system which uses fair rules of 10 imputation in accordance with the principle of culpability is that there 11 must exist a certain normative relationship or nexus between the alleged 12 contributing conduct, the contribution and the criminal result, a 13 relationship which in any case goes beyond a mere purely naturalistic 14 causal nexus. Even if we would require causality, we would require more 15 than the Prosecution. Because the Prosecution says non-essential 16 contribution. So causal contributions are per definitionem essential. A 17 contribution can only be causal if it causes an effect on the main crime 18 and therefore it must have a certain relevance. One can dispute the 19 relevance because the normative criterion, but in any case it must have a 20 certain relevance.

21 But even more so, in modern criminal law theories used in 22 Colombia, used in Spain, used in Germany, used in Italy, used in Brazil, 23 we have something which we call la teoría de la imputación objetiva, the 24 theory of objective imputation, which tries to create a normative link 25 between the act and the criminal result. And how does it do this? For

1 contribution, assistance, in these systems, let me just make clear there 2 is a form of a normative restriction of causation, which also is 3 accepted, for example, in the French law and which is accepted in the 4 English law, for example, by *A.T.H. Smith, all intents to 5 normatively restrict causation, yeah, in doctrine and in law belong to 6 this theory.

7 If one applies the theory which is essentially about the fair
8 imputation of criminal results to a person, to a human agent, a 9 contribution can only be punishable if, A, it creates a higher risk for 10 the protected legal interest by having a substantial impact on the actual 11 commission of the main crime. That means we have to examine if the 12 contribution Mr. Mbarushimana allegedly made had a substantial impact as 13 to the alleged crimes in terms of creating a higher risk for the 14 protected interests, for the life of the victims, for the integrity, 15 sexual autonomy, and so on. And secondly, that this risk manifests 16 itself in the commission of the crime insofar as this -- as it has been 17 realised in the commission, i.e., it had a comprehensible, visible, 18 tangible impact on the main crime.

19 Now, this theory which, as I said, has been or is used in many 20 national jurisdictions including in the common law jurisdiction, you will 21 find the references in my paper, has not made it to this Court. But this 22 Court in the Bemba confirmation decision, in the Bemba confirmation 23 decision, has used the concept of risk increase with regard to the 24 command responsibility doctrine. This Court has said for a commander, a 25 superior, to be responsible for the ensuing crimes of his or her

1 subordinates, it must be proven that his failure to intervene increased 2 the risks for the protected legal interests, increased the risk of the 3 commission of the crimes by the subordinates.

4 In other words, this Court, and I have commented on this decision
5 in the Leiden Journal of International Law, has taken the risk increase 6 theory in his case law. Now, the question is if it wants to develop this 7 further or if he just wants to leave it where it stands. It's just a 8 model how to define the contribution because what we have to do here is 9 to define what exactly is the contribution.

10 I cannot find any contribution in this sense in the document of 11 charges and in the presentation made by the Prosecution as regards 12 Mr. Mbarushimana. But in any case we have a second element which is 13 important and which stresses the individual character of subparagraph (d) 14 and that is the requirement of intent or, as subparagraph (d) says, "such 15 contribution shall be intentional ..." That's the first moment when 16 "intentional" is mentioned.

17 Now, this intentional, this element of intentional, in 18 subparagraph (d) refers to all objective elements of subparagraph (d), 19 i.e., to the contributing conduct, i.e., to the contribution which must 20 be intentional, the attempted commission of a crime by a group of persons 21 acting with a common purpose and the causal or even normative 22 relationship I have just explained between the contribution and the final 23 criminal result. As to the concrete meaning of "intentional," the term 24 must be interpreted in line with Article 30 of the ICC Statute. That 25 means it does not, as correctly decided by this Court, include dolus

1 eventualis and/or a recklessness or other lower thresholds than knowledge 2 or intent in the strict sense.

3 In other words, the concept of intent comprises what Article 30 4 says without dolus eventualis taking into account the interpretation of 5 this Court.

6 Now, in the document of charges of the Prosecution, it is said
7 that the suspect acted intentionally with respect to the committed 8 crimes. However, there are many contradictions in the presentation of 9 the Prosecution case. If you only look at paragraph 147 and compare it 10 to paragraph 149 of the document of containing the charges, you see in 11 paragraph 147 that the Prosecution derives or infers the knowledge of 12 Mr. Mbarushimana from his "position as executive secretary." And in 13 paragraph 149 it is said "he was in a position to demand information 14 about the allegations." I think it cannot be both ways. Either you know 15 because you are commander or you have to demand information. That's a 16 contradiction. Either you are in a position which enables you to know 17 anything what happens, even if you are a thousand kilometres away sitting 18 in Paris or you demand information. You demand information because you 19 don't know. You want to be sure what is happening.

20 Someone who is demanding information, if this is true - I don't 21 know - I'm just quoting the Prosecution case, can at best be responsible 22 for the standard of Article 28 of the Statute, the "should have known" 23 standard. A person who demands information in this case at best could 24 foresee, could foresee, could maybe have accepted certain results within 25 the meaning of dolus eventualis, but this standard, as I just have said,

1 is not covered by "intentional" in subparagraph (d).
2 Again here springs up from the Prosecution case the Joint 3 Criminal Enterprise III. Just to remind you, under Joint Criminal 4 Enterprise III, which apparently the Prosecution wants to squeeze into 5 this Statute, it is sufficient and necessary at the subjective level that 6 the member of the joint criminal enterprise, which according to the 7 Prosecution is not Mr. Mbarushimana, the member of the joint criminal 8 enterprise must foresee the possible commission of crimes pursuant to the 9 joint criminal enterprise and must willingly take the risk that these 10 crimes are committed dolus eventualis, Tadic Appeals Chamber and any case 11 law of the International Criminal Court for the former Yugoslavia. This 12 is not our law. This is not what is in subparagraph (d) of 13 Article 25(3).

14 In addition, subparagraph (d) with the two further subparagraphs 15 (i) and (ii) contains two further mental elements. That shows how we 16 tried in Rome and in New York to delimitate responsibility under 17 subparagraph (d). Not only did the States Parties put into subparagraph 18 (d) the contribution requirement and intentional, but in addition, I 19 quote from the Statute:

20 "Such contribution shall be intentional," we just dealt with 21 intentional, "and shall either," so there is an additional mental 22 element, "be made with the aim of furthering the criminal activity," 23 et cetera, et cetera, or "be made in the knowledge of the intention of 24 the group to commit the crime."

25 In other words, obviously this is an alternative requirement, the

1 Prosecution must prove or must for the standard of this confirmation
2 hearing provide reasonable grounds to believe that Mr. Mbarushimana not 3 only acted intentional under the general requirement under subparagraph 4 (d), but also that he either acted with the aim of furthering the 5 criminal purpose, i.e., he acted with volition, with desire, with 6 wanting, with will, that is a volitive element of dolus, or he acted with 7 knowledge.

8 I do not share the Prosecution opinion, as explained by 9 Ms. Solano in her presentation yesterday, that common purpose 1, how she 10 calls it, again common purpose, and she refers to subparagraph (d)(i) and 11 (ii), I quote page 45:

12 "Common purpose 1 emphasises intent over knowledge and common 13 purpose 2 emphasises knowledge over intent."

14 I do not agree with this because what we wanted to do in -- 15 basically in these subparagraphs, let's say, of (d) was to have 16 additional subjective thresholds which only need to be proven 17 alternatively, that is clear, but which either must be intentional or 18 volitional. Either cognitive or volitional, either with the aim of 19 purpose or with the knowledge. And again here, the knowledge which is 20 required is knowledge, I quote from subparagraph (d)(ii) of the Statute 21 "in the knowledge of the intention of the group to commit the crime ..."

22 This is a further restriction you must be aware, honourable 23 Judges, here. The first intention, the first intention subparagraph (d) 24 refers to the objective elements of the first phrase, the first clause, 25 of subpara (d) and the second mental element, which again is alternative

1 as to knowledge, the last element, refers to the crimes, to the crimes.
2 That has been a further restriction. So what we wanted to make sure is 3 that there must be a knowledge, a positive knowledge, of the crimes, of 4 the person who is liable under paragraph -- subparagraph (d).
5 Well, let me conclude - I think I talked enough - that given the 6 interpretation of subparagraph (d) in line with the travaux and the 7 wording, and please do consult the travaux, do consult the interpretation
8 by scholars like Cassese, Eser, Schabas and others, has nothing to do -- 9 Héctor Olásolo I should mention here, has nothing to do with common 10 purpose responsibility, nothing. When we had wanted to put this into the 11 Statute, as Ms. Solano seems to imply, we would have said it. We would 12 have used -- we had all the case law of the ICTY and the ICTR as to joint 13 criminal enterprise before us. We could have easily used a formula which 14 comes close to the Nuremberg precedent, which comes close to the case law 15 of the ICTY/ICTR, but we didn't do because we wanted to stress that in 16 any case for a person to be punishable, to be culpable, to be guilty
17 before this Court we must establish, according to the standard of proof 18 of the stage of the proceedings, an individual contribution, we must link 19 his contribution to concrete crimes. And this, in my modest opinion, 20 having studied the transcripts, having studied the document of charges, 21 is not the case here.

22 Thank you very much for your attention.

23 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you very much, Professor Ambos. And now back
24 to earth with a bang. We're going to examine the next locality, Luofu 25 and Kasiki, as mentioned in the Prosecution's document containing the

1 charges. For the attacks on Luofu and Kasiki, the OTP refers us to the 2 evidence of Witness 632, DRC-OTP-2034-0386 at 0427, who, quite frankly in 3 my opinion, shoots the Prosecution in the foot. This purported 4 incriminating witness, a witness who was specifically brought to support 5 the Prosecution case, states quite openly that the FDLR did not 6 perpetrate either the attack on Luofu or Kasiki. According to him, these 7 attacks were perpetrated by RUD-Urunana, which was a military faction
8 which splintered away from the FDLR and was headed by an individual 9 called General Musare, and I refer the learned Chamber to 10 DRC-OTP-2034-0429.

11 As Dr. Phil Clark explains, RUD-Urunana is in no way connected 12 either by way of ideology or by way of command structure to the FDLR.
13 What is more serious is that this apparent confusion between RUD and the 14 FDLR is adopted by the victims themselves. In this respect, I refer the 15 honourable Chamber to the Human Rights Watch report of December 2009, 16 I've given the ERN number elsewhere, which based on a survivor's 17 interview specifically states that it was RUD and not the FDLR which 18 attacked Luofu on 17th of April, 2009, killing seven civilians. This 19 attack was particularly shocking at the time because out of the seven 20 civilians killed, five were young children burned alive in their own 21 beds. Apparently, so Human Rights Watch asserts, the attack on Luofu was 22 motivated by an unpaid debt owing to RUD.

23 Human Rights Watch quite innocently admits that many witnesses 24 refer to both RUD and FDLR/FOCA combatants generically as FDLR or 25 Interahamwe, and I refer the honourable Chamber to footnote 175 on page

1 72 of the December 2009 Human Rights Watch report. The ERN is 2 DRC-OTP-2014-0240 at 0317. This imprecision of Human Rights Watch goes 3 to the very root of, once again, I must submit, its methodology. Bear in 4 mind that the interviewed witness talks about an attack perpetrated by 5 RUD. It is HRW's speculation or assumption, however, that RUD and FDLR
6 are synonymous, something which is totally rejected by OTP's more 7 reliable soldier witness, 632. The unconnected nature of RUD and FDLR is 8 also stressed by Prosecution Witness 527, a soldier who left the FDLR in 9 order to join RUD and upon repatriation was interviewed by the OTP. This 10 witness, and his interview is to be found at DRC-OTP-2033-0451, states 11 that from 2005 onwards, RUD and FDLR were separate organisations with 12 separate leaderships, that's at 0480, and separate executive committees, 13 0482.

14 Coming back to Human Rights Watch, it is inexplicable how in the 15 April 2009 press communiqué, to be found at DRC-OTP-2002-0865, this 16 professional organisation places the blame for the Luofu incident
17 squarely on the shoulders of FDLR, whereas in its December report later 18 in that year, it incriminates RUD without mentioning FDLR involvement.
19 DRC-OTP-2014-0240 at 317.

20 I just repeat my submission, and I apologise for doing this but 21 it is rather essential to the Prosecution case, the Human Rights Watch 22 reports should be viewed as being of negligible evidential value and 23 should not be relied on for proof of either the substantive elements or 24 the contextual elements of the crimes imputed to Mr. Mbarushimana.

25 Before concluding my summary of Luofu and Kasiki incidents, I

1 would like to refer to the BKA statement of Witness 564, which is also 2 relied on by the Prosecution is to be found at DRC-OTP-2024-0166, who at 3 page 180 -- sorry, 0180, mentions that he heard that houses were burned
4 at these villages pursuant to a command order and to pressure the Rwandan 5 government to negotiate with FDLR. Now, my opinion is that there can be 6 no doubt that this witness is trotting out the party line as promulgated 7 by the Prosecution and MONUC, UN DDRRR, especially in light of the 8 overwhelming evidence even from Human Rights Watch that these attacks 9 were carried out by RUD. Indeed, I refer to the report prepared in 10 August 2009, it's by an individual whose name I won't mention, a German 11 individual, and it's to be found at DRC-OTP-2003-0113, which at 0116 in a 12 footnote states that Kasiki was at the time populated by members of RUD, 13 suggesting that it was they that had evicted the previous military 14 occupants.

15 So much for Luofu and Kasiki. I now move on to the village of 16 Witness 673 and 674.

17 Witnesses 673 and 674 are husband and wife. Witness 674
18 describes how on a completely unspecified date she was waylaid by, and I 19 quote, "Rwandese Interahamwe." She does not state that she was waylaid 20 by FDLR, who robbed her. Shortly thereafter, a group of 30 individuals 21 appeared who proceeded to gang-rape both her and her friends. In 22 Witness 674's statement to be found at DRC-OTP-2034-1527, these 23 individuals have no identifying features and there are no grounds for 24 suspecting that they were in any way affiliated to the FDLR. The same 25 goes for the attack on Witness 674's village. This is the sum total of 1 her evidence, and I do quote:

2 "On the day we were attacked we were inside and we heard 3 gun-shots. We went outside to see where the gun-shots were coming 4 from ... but we never knew there were others who were closer. People 5 were saying 'they are here, they have reached us.'"

6 Who these people are, who these "they" are, the witness was not 7 asked and does not explain. If you ask me, these perpetrators could have 8 been anyone. Witness 673, DRC-OTP-2034-1533, places his wife's rape in 9 2009. But it is the Prosecution who tells us that this happened in 10 mid-2009, but that part has been redacted out of the summary provided.
11 I'm referring to document containing charges, of course.

12 Witness 673 states that his village was attacked at night, 13 whereas his wife, Witness 674, stated that it happened in the morning. A 14 contradiction that Witness 673 wasn't able to explain. Taken together, 15 both these statements, in my respectful submission, are unreliable and 16 lack weight. So much for Witness 673 and Witness 674.

17 I now refer to the incidents which the Prosecution called the 18 Busurungi vicinity incidents, not the Busurungi incident, but the 19 Busurungi vicinity incidents. Paragraph 67 of the document containing 20 the charges describes a particularly gruesome incident concerning the 21 discovery of the corpses of three women who had gone missing from 22 Busurungi. These corpses were found - and I do apologise for the nature 23 of what I'm about to read out - "with sticks inserted into their 24 vaginas."

25 The DCC states that the incidents in question occurred at the end

1 of April 2009. The evidence, however, says otherwise. Witness 683 2 states at paragraph 19 of his statement that the incident occurred in 3 March 2009, and Witness 655 states that it took place on 27th February 4 2009. And I refer the -- honourable Chamber to DRC-OTP-2025-0074. Quite 5 a difference and quite significant because the Prosecution has to prove 6 that this incident, in my opinion, fell within the time-frame of either 7 of the two armed conflicts identified, Umoja Wetu and Kimia II.

8 Let me remind the learned Chamber of what I believe to be the 9 zigzagging performed by the Prosecution on the issue of the 10 characterisation of the armed conflict. When it first filed its 11 application under Article 58 of the Rome Statute, the Prosecution argued 12 that war crimes were committed during two distinct periods during 2009, 13 from 20th of January to 21st February, when an order was given for the 14 Rwanda Defence Force to cease the Operation Umoja Wetu; and from 2 March 15 to 31 December 2009, otherwise known as Kimia II. At paragraph 57 of the 16 arrest warrant application, the OTP stated quite specifically that 17 Umoja Wetu was, and I quote, "international in nature, given the direct 18 intervention of Rwanda through its troops."

19 Now, your Honours issued an arrest warrant on the basis of this 20 assertion and made a judicial finding that Umoja Wetu was indeed an 21 international conflict on a reasonable grounds basis, of course. So, I 22 ask myself: What has changed? Well, I submit nothing from an evidential 23 point of view. It is just as Mr. Steynberg seemed to be admitting in his 24 opening presentation, the Prosecution got it wrong from a legal point of 25 view. The involvement of Rwanda, according to him, was not an

1 occupation. So the more appropriate to classify the conflict as 2 non-international.

3 Now, I'm not inclined to accept this explanation for the 4 Prosecution's change of mind and I believe that the truth of the matter 5 is that it is more convenient for the Prosecution to define the whole of 6 2009 as one long non-international armed conflict. That way the 7 Prosecution solves the problem of the doubt which attaches to those 8 charged incidents which could have occurred between 25 February and 2 9 March.

10 Now, I ask your Honours to uphold your former ruling or to 11 require the Prosecution to produce evidence to convince you of the fact 12 that during the interim period between Umoja Wetu and Kimia II there was 13 an ongoing military engagement of sufficient intensity for it to be 14 defined as a non-international armed conflict for the purpose of the 15 contextual requirements of war crimes.

16 Now, this issue should be sufficient, in my submission, for the 17 learned Chamber not to factor the Busurungi incident, discovery of the 18 corpses, into its decision whether or not to confirm the charges of 19 murder, mutilation, and torture. In any event, the charges of mutilation 20 and torture are particularly irrelevant here because there is no way 21 whatsoever that the Prosecution can prove that the dreadful disfigurement 22 of these poor women was committed either before or after their deaths.

23 I mention, of course, all these matters before I even touch on 24 the question of whether or not the Prosecution has succeeded in proving 25 the identity of the person or persons who killed the three women in

1 question. (Expunged) states, and I give the reference, 2 DRC-OTP-2032-0803, that the government went to look for the perpetrators 3 but could not find them. Moreover, neither she nor (Expunged), who 4 actually discovered the disfigured bodies, mentions the FDLR as potential 5 suspects. This is also the case with respect to another gruesome
6 incident related second-hand by (Expunged), namely, the rape of a 7 pregnant woman in March of 2009 who was subsequently eviscerated with her 8 foetus extracted. She does not state the identity of the attackers in 9 her statement and the OTP's attribution of this, quite frankly, 10 disgusting crime to the FDLR is speculation. And I provide the 11 reference, DRC-OTP-2032-0799 at 0803, that's paragraph 18 -- 19, sorry.

12 Only (Expunged) suggests that the culprits of the corpses
13 incident were members of the FDLR and that is on the basis of gossip 14 picked up from some local women. (Expunged) speculates that it was the 15 Interahamwe, the Rwandan soldiers who did the crime, and that is because 16 they had done the same thing elsewhere.

17 To sum up, there is no credible source for believing that the 18 FDLR had anything to do with this incident.

19 The document containing the charges also makes reference to 20 another grotesque incident involving the abduction of a young man whose 21 corpse was later found with his - and once again I do apologise for the 22 details - his genitals stuffed into his mouth. Now, out of respect for 23 the dead, I shall of course not mention his name, but out of respect for 24 Mr. Mbarushimana, these unnecessary details should never have been 25 included in a document containing the charges because they bear no

1 connection whatsoever to the criminal state of mind imputed to him.

2 In any event, for this shock episode the Prosecution relies on 3 the statement of (Expunged), who states that the killing took place in 4 March 2009 and was reported to her by the men who buried the unfortunate 5 victim. In other words, she never saw the disfigured corpse.

6 (Expunged) also give evidence about this incident.

7 (Expunged) states that it took place on the 3rd of March, 2009, and 8 relates the incident as reported to him by the deceased's wife, 9 second-hand hearsay. According to the wife, the shocking murder,
10 DRC-OTP-2025-0107 at 0112, the murder was carried out not by the FDLR
11 but, and I quote, "Rwandese soldiers."

12 Now, I will not insult anyone's intelligence by suggesting that 13 Rwandese soldiers and the FDLR are one and the same thing. Given the 14 nature of the military coalition between the FARDC and the Rwandan 15 Defence Force, would it not be more reasonable to assume that these 16 soldiers to which the witness refers in fact belonged to the official 17 Rwandan army? And if that is the case, why has the Prosecutor and his 18 intrepid investigators not gone knocking on the door of the hierarchy of 19 the Rwandese government --

20 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Mr. Kaufman, you have been asked to 21 slow down a bit.

22 MR. KAUFMAN: Oh, I do apologise. As I said, if that is the 23 case, then the Prosecutor could have explored other avenues of 24 investigation and other hierarchies. The murder of this emasculated 25 Congolese civilian is about as well substantiated against him, the other

1 people who could have been investigated for this matter, as it is against 2 Mr. Mbarushimana.

3 As for (Expunged), he states that the murder took place a week
4 earlier, that is, on 22nd February 2009, but far from mentioning 5 decapitation and genitals in the mouth, he states, as he learned it from 6 his sources, that the victim had died not from machete wounds but from 7 gun-shots. And I refer the Chamber to DRC-OTP-2025-0070 at 0073, 8 paragraph 16.

9 So what can we conclude from all this evidence? First of all,
10 absolutely nothing with the requisite standard of proof. And secondly, 11 it is extremely danger to rely on hearsay evidence. But in the case of 12 various NGO reports it could, for all we know, even be anything up to 13 third-hand hearsay based on speculation.

14 (Defence counsel confer)

15 MR. KAUFMAN: I'm about to start Mianga and that's quite a long 16 incident. Would this be a convenient point for the learned Chamber to 17 break?

18 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: I think this will be the right place.

19 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you, Madam President.

20 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: The session is adjourned and will 21 resume at 11.30. Thank you.

22 COURT USHER: All rise.

20 COURT OFFICER: We are in open session, Madam President.

21 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you. Go on, Mr. Kaufman.

22 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you, Madam President.

23 Professor Kai Ambos presents his apologies. For urgent personal 24 reasons he had to leave. But he did ask me to correct one matter which 25 was a verbal slip on his behalf and it's in the realtime transcript at 1 page 9, lines 13 to 18, he referred to subparagraphs (d) and (e) twice.

2 What he actually meant was subparagraph (d) and (a). As I said, that's 3 not a correction for the transcript, it's a correction of something that 4 Mr. -- sorry, Professor Ambos said.

5 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you very much. We've taken note 6 of that.

7 MR. KAUFMAN: And before I proceed also I must apologise, so I've 8 been told, to the French translators. I am going too quickly. I will do 9 my best to slow down.

10 So I now turn to Mianga, an incident which the Prosecution
11 alleges took place in April 2009. For this incident the Prosecution 12 relies on Witness 544, who states that he was not there, i.e., at Mianga, 13 but heard about it from other soldiers who were there and who were 14 allegedly bragging about the anatomy of the local women's genitalia and 15 how, on occasion, objects had been inserted into the said sexual organs.
16 On closer examination of the evidence, however, one understands that the 17 penetration of a spear into the vagina of a woman, a woman concerned in 18 the interview of Witness 544, was actually performed on a corpse.
19 Disgusting, well, may be; dishonouring the dead, may be. It is most 20 certainly not rape nor is it mutilation. Now, desperate for a positive 21 answer, the OTP investigator - and Ms. Solano herself who was present 22 there - asked Witness 562 if this form of penetration was only performed 23 on dead bodies and the answer they received was that he had no 24 information as to whether spears were introduced into the vaginas of 25 living women. I refer the Chamber to 2033-0181, prefaced of course by

1 DRC-OTP, at line 558.

2 So what information do we have from this witness, Witness 562, 3 who, in my opinion, is a self-confessed liar, as to crimes committed at 4 Mianga? Nothing. Nothing apart from a bit of hearsay concerning some 5 necrophilic activities. And this is the sole witness on which the 6 Prosecution relies to prove rape, torture, and inhumane acts at Mianga, 7 and I beg the Pre-Trial Chamber not to underestimate the unreliability of 8 this witness. This is the witness who stated that the infamous FDLR 9 officer called Vainqueur, and that's spelled V-a-i-n-q-u-e-u-r, was 10 present at Busurungi in his second statement, yet in his first statement 11 to the OTP stated he was in fact absent at Busurungi because he had gone 12 to plan his wedding. And I refer the Pre-Trial Chamber to 13 DRC-OTP-2033-0191.

14 For the attack on Mianga, the Prosecution also relies on the 15 evidence of Witness 528, who from the OTP's list of evidence was tendered 16 to show that there was an FDLR attack there. This, however, is not what 17 he states or volunteers. It is, rather, what the investigator puts to 18 him. And I refer the learned Pre-Trial Chamber to DRC-OTP-2033-1113 at 19 page 1154.

20 Continuing with the attack on Mianga, the Prosecution also relies 21 on Witness 559 who, according to the Prosecution, received an order from 22 Sylvestre Mudacumura, namely, that his unit was required to, and I quote, 23 "chase" the enemy that was based in Mianga. Fair enough. Chasing the 24 enemy, in my submission, means exactly what it says, engaging an enemy 25 stronghold, which, in my submission, is legal, and not attacking

1 defenceless civilians, which is of course illegal. DRC-OTP-2033-1825.
2 At page 1827, the witness talks about how the FARDC would encamp their 3 soldiers within civilian residential quarters. At page 1832, the witness
4 describes the fact that FARDC forces were attacked during an operation
5 which started at 5.00 in the morning. Subsequently, the FARDC forces
6 fled and some civilians remained in their houses. However, Witness 559 7 states emphatically that he was ignorant of what happened thereafter.

8 Witness 587 is also relied upon by the Prosecution, according to 9 its list of evidence, for the Mianga attack. And here reference is made 10 to a general order which was signed by Sylvestre Mudacumura, an order to 11 burn civilian houses, an order that the same civilians would become a 12 burden for the Congolese government. This order which the Defence
13 strenuously disputes was given at the end of February 2009 14 DRC-OTP-2034-1362 at 1372. However, according to 587, this order was 15 qualified, something which is not mentioned by the Prosecution, it was 16 qualified insofar as it was forbidden to kill civilians and only burn the 17 houses of those civilians from where Congolese soldiers would be coming.
18 I quote the reference DRC-OTP-2034-1362 at page 1373.

19 Witness 564 also testifies as to having seen burned houses at 20 Mianga, DRC-OTP-2030-1277. But he clarifies that he only arrived there 21 when the attack had ended and cannot therefore state whether the houses 22 were deliberately subjected to arson or set on fire as a result of 23 collateral damage in the heat of battle. As I said, there is ample 24 evidence in the Prosecution's databases to show that mortars and heavy 25 machine-gun fire was used, and we all know what that type of weaponry can

1 cause when fired upon straw houses or houses with straw roofs.
2 Mianga, the Prosecution also relies on Witness 632. He merely 3 confirms that the FDLR attacked Mianga because it was an FARDC stronghold 4 and that they seized guns and bullets, something which is corroborated by 5 the intercepted SMS allegedly sent between Leopold Mujyambere and 6 Ignace Murwanashyaka listing the number of military casualties,
7 DRC-OTP-2013-4936. Indeed, the Prosecution list of evidence cites an SMS 8 from Leopold Mujyambere to Ignace Murwanashyaka which supports the 9 Defence case; namely, that Mianga was a military attack during which FDLR 10 soldiers, including a battalion commander, were killed. It also mentions 11 the massacre of Hutu refugees, a theme repeated in a second SMS referred 12 to in the Prosecution list of evidence for this incident,
13 DRC-OTP-2022-0319.

14 I do not, in the circumstances, see the need to dwell too much on 15 a human rights report which deal with the Mianga attack when the 16 Prosecution's own ex-FDLR witnesses do not confirm that there was 17 deliberate targeting of civilians. Suffice it to say that the UNJHRO
18 report, DRC-OTP-2016-0033, confirms at paragraph 23 that the FARDC 25th 19 Brigade had established a position in Mianga village. And at paragraph 20 26 states that the FDLR attacked this position defeating the resistance.
21 After the attack six civilians were allegedly killed, but the fact that 22 this was undeniably a military operation and the fact that only military 23 losses were reported back to Murwanashyaka would tend to confirm that 24 there was no plan - and I stress no plan - to attack the civilian 25 population per se, but such attacks on civilians, if they did indeed

1 happen, were wholly unauthorised. Indeed, the Reuters article cited by 2 the Prosecution at DRC-OTP-2020-0513 states that more soldiers were 3 killed at Mianga, namely, ten of them, than civilians, four of them, 4 something which once again confirms that the motivation for the attack
5 was not to terrorise the village residents but to suppress the FARDC.

6 So before I conclude my examination of the Mianga attack carried 7 out in April 2009, I would like to point out one particularly interesting 8 SMS which Gaston Iyamuremye is alleged to have said to 9 Ignace Murwanashyaka. This SMS is to be found at DRC-OTP-2013-5538 and 10 its translation at DRC-OTP-2021-0202. Here the alleged second 11 vice-president of the FDLR is petitioning, allegedly, the president of 12 the FDLR and telling him that he would send the file concerning Busurungi 13 and Mianga in which, and I quote, "we are accused of having killed the 14 inhabitants."

15 It is almost as if Gaston is telling Ignace that there are people 16 making false allegations against the FDLR and that Ignace needs to do 17 something to deal with the matter. After all, if Gaston knew that the 18 FDLR had killed inhabitants, why would he say to Ignace "we are accused 19 of killed inhabitants"? Surely he would say: I'm passing you the file 20 of Busurungi and Mianga where we actually killed inhabitants. All this, 21 in my submission, goes to prove, as we shall see later, that even 22 Ignace Murwanashyaka was not receiving positive information as to the 23 commission of crimes by the FDLR.

24 So now I turn to the notorious, infamous Busurungi incident about 25 which we have heard so much, the incident which occurred in May 2009.

1 First Prosecution witness, Witness 562. He makes it abundantly
2 clear that the Busurungi incident occurred as a result of the illegal 3 orders of an errant and insubordinate officer who, acting, in my 4 submission, on a frolic of his own, commanded the soldiers under his 5 authority to attack civilians. Witness 562 makes it clear that before 6 the attack on Busurungi was initiated, there was a reconnaissance mission 7 and thereafter a briefing. After the reconnaissance mission, Witness 562 8 states that the order, and I quote, "... was to go and fight against the 9 soldiers and not the civilian people," and I stress the word "not."
10 Subsequently the witness added that he got surprised when he heard that 11 he and his fellow soldiers had to attack and kill everything that moves, 12 be it a person or animal. This surprise being namely the savage twists 13 to the attack on Busurungi. All this is to be found at 14 ERN-DRC-OTP-2033-0135.

15 When asked who gave the order to destroy everything that moved in 16 Busurungi, the witness stated the Colonel du Brigade Kalume. Now, this 17 is a name which will be repeated quite a lot in the course of my 18 submission on Busurungi. I refer the Pre-Trial Chamber to 19 DRC-OTP-2033-0141.

20 Before these atrocities took place, however, there was, according 21 to Witness 562, a fire-fight between the opposing forces so fierce that 22 the villagers were instructed that they had to hide under their beds so 23 that the bullets could not reach them. In any event, the orders for the 24 crimes committed at Busurungi according to this witness were executed by 25 Lieutenant Mandarine, who on instruction -- who was acting on the

1 instruction of Colonel Kalume after the reconnaissance mission and after 2 the briefing before the attack -- and at the briefing before the attack, 3 I apologise. I refer the Chamber to DRC-OTP-2033-0132.

4 Now, what is surprising here are the kid gloves with which the 5 Prosecution dealt with this witness who is nothing more or less than a 6 cold-blooded murderer. The OTP offered him immunity from Prosecution
7 pursuant to Rule 55(2), only then to hear his confession as to shooting 8 dead innocent civilians and thereafter totally exculpate the FOCA command 9 from any involvement.

10 Despite the butchery, Witness 562 states quite frankly that he 11 did not see any incidents of sexual assault during the attack
12 DRC-OTP-2033-0152. Unsatisfied, however, with this answer, the OTP 13 investigator then tried his luck with what must be one of the more 14 bizarre questions in the annals of criminal investigating, and I quote 15 the question and answer:

16 "Q. But is it also possible that it," namely sexual assault, 17 "happened and some people did it but they would not have told you?

18 "A. Yeah, it is possible and maybe they kept it confidential 19 because that's a crime."

20 To be found at DRC-OTP-2033-0159.

21 The investigator, unsatisfied, then tried exploring whether there 22 were any mutilations at Busurungi, given that the previously mentioned 23 Mandarine apparently had a morbid penchant for cutting off penises as 24 souvenirs. The witness admitted lying in his first interview, as I have 25 mentioned already, DRC-OTP-2033-0176, which obviously destroys his

1 general credibility and said that he heard about penis mutilations but 2 had not seen such and nor could he tell whether such mutilations were 3 performed on civilians or soldiers, alive or dead, DRC-OTP-2033-0175.

4 Continuing with Busurungi, let's turn to another witness,
5 Witness 528. He also confirms that the attack on Busurungi was intended 6 to be purely military, and I quote from the Prosecution's summary, 7 DRC-OTP-2040-1389 at 1404. I turn to French.

8 (Interpretation) "The witness added that civilians also died 9 because of the shots fired and the bullets that had been shot at night.
10 It was impossible to distinguish in the darkness what -- to make out what 11 the target was nor what direction the bullets were travelling in. The 12 witness added that he knew before the attack that he was going to be 13 going off to attack a military position, not civilians in the village of 14 Busurungi."

15 (In English) That's from the Prosecution's own summary of this 16 witness, an incriminating witness. This witness also, according to the 17 summary and his evidence, knew nothing of alleged sexual violence at 18 Busurungi, DRC-OTP-2040-1389 at 1405. And what is more, stated that a 19 specific order had been given by a certain Colonel Sirusi, that's 20 S-i-r-u-s-i, before the attack that this -- before the attack. Sirusi 21 gave an order that this particular type of aggression, namely, sexual 22 aggression, was prohibited, DRC-OTP-2040-1389 at 1407. Once again I 23 suggest that this just goes to prove that the awful atrocities that were 24 allegedly committed at Busurungi were totally unauthorised.

25 Witness 542, he also took part in the attack on Busurungi. He

1 relates, once again, that this was a carefully planned attack on an enemy 2 stronghold where troops had been encamped among civilians, although 542 3 was told that the order from the operation had come from FOCA, but 4 specifically that the orders to burn houses in the heat of battle came 5 not from FOCA high command but from the brigade, DRC-OTP-2040-1222 at 6 1240. He stated that the order to burn houses had come from Kalume and 7 that this order was qualified thereafter by Kalume's subordinate Cyrus, 8 that's C-y-r-u-s, who told Witness 542 and his fellow troops that they 9 were to burn houses, and I quote, "once everybody was out. 542 did not 10 testify about the death of civilians but corroborated Witness 528 in 11 stating that if they died, it was unavoidable because of their proximity 12 to FARDC soldiers.

13 Now perhaps the most conclusive piece of evidence relating to the 14 Busurungi attack, which proves, in my submission, without a shadow of a 15 doubt that it was not a pre-meditated assault on a civilian population, 16 is provided by Witness 587. This witness is an extremely important 17 witness for the Prosecution. I shan't, in mind of Madam President's 18 earlier caution, mention exactly his function, but I will say that he was 19 the eyes and ears of the Prosecution in a certain position he had within 20 FOCA.

21 I'm wondering whether we could go to private session so I could 22 mention him, his function, just briefly. It is quite important.

23 (Pre-Trial Chamber confers)

24 MR. KAUFMAN: It will be the only time I mention it.

23 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Mr. Kaufman, I understand there's a

24 problem with the French transcript. Do you still want to continue?

25 MR. KAUFMAN: I was told that I was speaking too fast and that

1 was the problem with the French transcript. But if it is something which 2 is not connected to the speed of my submissions, then I have no -- may I 3 actually on this matter consult with my client because French, after all,
4 is the language in which he will be consulting the transcript. May I 5 inquire also what the nature of the problem is, perhaps?

6 COURT OFFICER: Your Honour, if I may, we have lost the 7 connection with the French transcript. It's not related to the speed or 8 the rate of your submissions. We're trying to resolve this issue as soon 9 as possible, and currently the French transcript is not available.

10 MR. KAUFMAN: If I may just have one short minute to consult with 11 my client.

12 (Defence counsel and Mr. Mbarushimana confer)

13 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Mr. Kaufman, the problem continues 14 with the transcript.

15 MR. KAUFMAN: Madam President, I'm happy to say that my client is 16 fully conscious of the tight schedule of this Chamber and he says that 17 there is no problem in us continuing. We will assist him, of course, 18 with any problems that may arise with translating the English transcript.

19 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Legal Representatives, what's your 20 view?

21 MR. MABANGA: (Interpretation) Your Honour, I believe it is 22 important for us to have the transcript available in French because, as 23 you know, at the end of the various oral submissions we shall have some 24 observations of our own to make, and it would be of import for us to be 25 able to follow in realtime the transcript so that when we have the final

1 transcript we could perhaps be in a position to see whether there were 2 any mistakes or not. I obviously appreciate the concern of the Defence, 3 but I do believe that it is important for the correctness of our 4 proceedings that the transcript should be available in French as well.
5 Thank you, your Honour.

6 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Are you okay, Mr. Kassongo? Thank 7 you.

9 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: If I may address Legal 10 Representatives, the procedure is that at the end you will have the 11 record, the edited record in realtime. So this is a temporary problem.
12 So we can continue. You will afterwards get the full record.

13 Thank you very much, Mr. Kaufman, we can continue.

14 MR. KAUFMAN: So as I said, for reasons which were mentioned in 15 private session, Witness 587 was the eyes and ears of the Prosecution in 16 FOCA high command and he, in my submission, would have known things that 17 were going backwards and forwards between Sylvestre Mudacumura and 18 Ignace Murwanashyaka. Concerning the Busurungi incident, Witness 587 has 19 the following interesting information, and I quote from the Prosecution's 20 summary of his evidence:

21 "In Busurungi, civilians were killed in April or May 2009. It 22 was announced on the news. In order for Ignace Murwanashyaka to know 23 what really happened in the field, Mudacumura had to report back with a 24 sitrep. This request came via Thuraya, then went via the transmission 25 centre so that Sylvestre Mudacumura could know what happened in the 1 field. Mudacumura wrote the commander of the Reserve Brigade Kalume," 2 that name once again, "informing him that the president wanted to know if 3 they had really killed civilians."

4 So what can we learn from this? Well, in my submission, it 5 basically destroys the Prosecution case. Here we have the most 6 well-positioned individual to report on communications from the field to 7 Europe telling us that the death of civilians at Busurungi had surprised 8 Ignace Murwanashyaka and he wanted to know whether it was true. Are 9 these the acts of a man who had planned an attack on a civilian 10 population? Quite the opposite, I submit. These are the acts of a man 11 who had no idea what had gone on at Busurungi.

12 Kalume replied the following day with a sitrep, stating that 13 civilians were intermingled with soldiers at Busurungi and got killed as 14 well. According to Witness 587, Mudacumura then transmitted this message 15 to Ignace Murwanashyaka via Thuraya. As if there remains any doubt, this 16 well-positioned witness specifically states that he did not hear of an 17 attack being planned on Busurungi. I refer this time not to the summary 18 but to his evidence, 2034-1400, prefaced by DRC-OTP, at 1402. The 19 witness furthermore adds that units which perform attacks such as 20 Busurungi have no direct communication with FOCA high command. What 21 happens is that the units write a sitrep and give it to their commander 22 who in turn refers the sitrep to FOCA.

23 Witness 587 saw no message transmitted by radiophonie concerning 24 a report to attack Busurungi nor did he see any sitrep that came back to 25 FOCA during -- during the attack on Busurungi, DRC-OTP-2034-1400 at 1402.

1 Witness 587 was also questioned about the sexual violence committed at 2 Busurungi and stated that no such information had ever reached him at 3 FOCA, documenting such criminal activity. DRC-OTP-2034-1400 at 1408. He 4 also states emphatically that the FDLR code of conduct taught to even the 5 lowest-ranking soldiers forbade sexual violence, DRC-OTP-2034-1411.

6 To conclude, Busurungi might have been a well-planned attack to 7 oust the FARDC from that village, that locality, but neither Mudacumura 8 or Ignace Murwanashyaka even intended harm to the civilians resident 9 there. Indeed, one of the most senior witnesses who is now a PEXO
10 witness, 672, I mentioned his name in private session, now a PEXO witness 11 of course because he, quite frankly, doesn't support the Prosecution 12 case, and he's a former acquaintance of Mudacumura, he states that 13 Mudacumura was not pleased with some of the things that had happened at 14 Busurungi and he had regretted, that is, Mudacumura, that there had been 15 civilians killed. And Mudacumura blamed those that carried out the 16 attack, i.e., Kalume. I refer the Chamber to DRC-OTP-2029-0893, line 17 672.

18 Would you believe it, your Honours, this witness, 672, as I said, 19 the highest-ranking FDLR officer interviewed by the OTP and deemed 20 irrelevant to the Prosecution case, stated, in the presence of 21 Ms. Solano, that Mudacumura told the brigade commander, Kalume, that he 22 should be prepared to go to The Hague for what he had done at Busurungi.
23 DRC-OTP-2029-0893 at line 690. So much for Busurungi.

24 I now turn ...

25 (Pre-Trial Chamber confers)

1 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Sorry, Mr. Kaufman, we have received a 2 message to the effect that the French realtime is working now.

3 You may continue.

4 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you, Madam President.

5 I now turn to the alleged attack on Manje on or about 20/21 July 6 2009, as alleged in the document containing the charges. For this 7 incident on its list of evidence, the Prosecution relied on the evidence 8 of Witness 693, who, in my submission, is apparently talking about a 9 different incident entirely which occurred almost a whole month earlier, 10 in the month of June 2009. PTC, Pre-Trial Chamber, sorry, is referred to 11 the redacted summary of this witness's evidence at DRC-OTP-2036-1155 at 12 paragraph 10, where the witness adds that the attack was carried out, 13 rather bizarrely, by people who prior to the attack were fraternising 14 with government soldiers, that is the FARDC. Here, the witness quite 15 conveniently identifies his (Expunged) as FDLR by virtue of a 16 signed note which they believed -- which they delivered to him
17 purportedly in the name of the FDLR. That's to be found at paragraph 29 18 of the witness summary. There was, however, nothing incriminating in 19 this note. And on a more general note, Witness 693 did not experience at 20 first hand any atrocities being committed at Manje, such as murder or 21 arson, (Expunged). And as he said, and I quote from 22 paragraph 17 of his summary:

23 (Expunged)

24 (Expunged)

25 Witness 561, an ex-FDLR soldier, reports having heard that Manje

1 was attacked by a unit under the command of a certain Captain Barozi, 2 B-a-r-o-z-i, whose name I would ask the learned Pre-Trial Chamber to 3 remember since it is corroborated by the next witness to whom I shall 4 refer, Witness 562. However, of all the witnesses brought by the 5 Prosecution for the Manje incident is probably the most reliable. And 6 don't forget that the Prosecution rely on him as incriminating witness.
7 Witness 562 is the only true eye-witness insofar as he is an ex-FDLR 8 soldier who participated in this attack.

9 Unlike the unreliable victim witness 693, who stated that the 10 attack started at 10.00 at night on June 2009, Witness 562 states that 11 the military assault started at 3.00 in the morning, DRC-OTP-2032-1371 at 12 1382. The attack according to this witness, 562, was motivated by the 13 fact that Manje was a stronghold, both for the FARDC and for the local 14 Mayi-Mayi. Quite contrary to Witness 693, Witness 562 does not state 15 that the FARDC troops had left before the shooting began and adds that 16 civilians were caught up in the cross-fire. DRC-OTP-2032-1387.
17 Witness 562 then relates how the FARDC soldiers tried to call for 18 reinforcements by waking up their fellow soldiers who were sleeping at 19 the time. Finally, the FDLR elements shot at the FARDC soldiers and 20 overpowered them, DRC-OTP-2032-1389.

21 Witness 562 makes it quite clear that the same Captain Barozi, 22 who I referred to earlier, gave a legal order, namely, that the soldiers 23 under his command, including Witness 562, were to set fire to the 24 military position alone. When asked by the OTP investigator whether 25 civilians' houses were deliberately torched, the witness denied the

1 allegation. This Prosecution witness denied it and stated that adjoining 2 houses could have caught fire from the conflagration issuing from the 3 former FARDC position. DRC-OTP-2032-1389, lines 624 to 626. What I've 4 been saying all along, collateral damage in legitimate warfare.

5 Unlike Witness 562, Witness 564, another OTP witness for the 6 Manje incident, did not participate in the incident on Manje but, rather, 7 heard about it from other soldiers, DRC-OTP-2030-1269. When he was asked 8 about the burning of houses as a deliberate FDLR tactic, the witness 9 stated that the purpose thereof served a legitimate military aim, and I 10 quote:

11 "... so every time when they made an attack, they first just had 12 to chase out the enemy. Then they came back. Then put fire on houses so 13 that in case the enemy comes back, they could not find shelters to stay."

14 DRC-OTP-2030-1279 at lines 357 to 9.

15 Now, whilst not condoning such a tactic, I don't believe that 16 this is the sort of tactic which should be the subject of a criminal 17 prosecution at the International Criminal Court. Such a tactic is 18 employed by many armies in modern-day warfare. It even has a name, it's 19 called area denial. Of course it has unpleasant consequences for those 20 formerly residing in the burned houses, but when these houses provided 21 cover for army troops, armed troops, and thus provided an essential 22 contribution to the military effort, their destruction is a doubtful 23 crime and perhaps a legitimate military objective. In any event -- well, 24 I see the Prosecution look of a bit of disbelief but then, in my 25 submission, this is something which really should have been investigated

1 at the time, excluding it at any rate as one of the possibilities that 2 could have been taking place there before jumping to the conclusion that 3 this was a crime, a deliberate torching of civilian houses. In any 4 event, in my submission, Witness 564's evidence creates substantial doubt 5 as to whether the burning of houses was a deliberate criminal act 6 committed against civilians and sanctioned by a superior hierarchy.

7 Finally, the last Prosecution witness on which they rely for the 8 Manje incident, Witness 632, states that all he knows about the Manje 9 incident he learned from Radio Okapi. The Human Rights Watch report "You 10 Will Be Punished" gives many details concerning the Manje attack of July 11 2009, stating that at least 30 people were massacred. There is, however, 12 no reason why this anonymous victim-based report should be preferred to 13 that of the other more contemporaneous human rights investigation 14 performed by OCHA, and that's to be found at DRC-OTP-2003-0120. And this 15 report is more circumspect as to the number of dead, stating that it was 16 somewhere around ten, of which number we assert soldiers formed a part.
17 So much for Manje. Moving on.

18 I now turn to Malembe, an August 2009 incident. In its more 19 detailed list of evidence, the Prosecutor -- Prosecution cited 20 Witness 544 for the evidence of an August 2009 attack at Malembe. This 21 witness, 544, gives a very detailed account of the events which 22 transpired. Apparently Rumuli, one of the most senior FDLR commanders
23 had been suffering military losses at the hands of Mayi-Mayi and FARDC 24 entities who had evicted Hutu refugees from Malembe. He thus called in 25 the infamous Reserve Brigade for support, of which Witness 544 was a

1 member. Witness 544 specifically states that he was ordered to attack 2 not civilians but the Mayi-Mayi and FARDC troops, to shoot at them, and 3 that's to be found at 2032-1619, prefaced of course by DRC-OTP, at 1628.
4 Interestingly, this witness also stated that there were CNDP soldiers 5 present fighting the FDLR, DRC-OTP-2032-1689.

6 According to Witness 544, however, this incident was in fact at 7 the start of the year and it was the only incident at Malembe concerning 8 which he had knowledge, not in August. Witness 544 even states that no
9 planning for this Malembe incident was even done before his unit reported 10 to Brigadier General Rumuli, DRC-OTP-2032-1681. How, therefore, does the 11 Prosecution impute this incident to the FDLR leadership as a crime of 12 intent?

13 The next witness, 542, he didn't fight at Malembe yet he 14 corroborates Witness 544 and states that there was an attack on the same 15 locality. The date is not clear, but the target was quite specifically 16 Mayi-Mayi, according to him, and FARDC soldiers and only soldiers were 17 killed there, i.e., not civilians. That's what he states.
18 DRC-OTP-2033-2198 at 2209, lines 364 to 373. He also states that only 19 enemies' houses were burned, not civilian houses, enemy houses, at 2210, 20 lines 396 to 400.

21 Next witness, Witness 561, he also stated that the attack on 22 Malembe targeted the Mayi-Mayi and clarified that it was carried out by 23 Cen, that's C-e-n, the special company, according to him, of the 24 Reserve Brigade, at the order of Rumuli. According to Witness 561, this 25 attack happened after the May attack on Busurungi. So we have very 1 confused dates for this attack on Malembe. And I refer the learned

2 Pre-Trial Chamber to DRC-OTP-2028-1532 at 1536 and 7.
3 Witness 562 also characterises the Malembe incident in similar 4 fashion to Witness 544; namely, that it was a military operation designed 5 to provide support for General Rumuli, who had been besieged by the 6 Mayi-Mayi in the Bunyarwanda forest, just by Malembe, and had lost 18 of 7 his people, DRC-OTP-2032-1216 at 1272. Like Witness 544, Witness 562
8 participated in the attack on Malembe. According to Witness 562, 9 Rumuli's orders were specific and delivered, not in advance but in the 10 forest right nearby Malembe. They were told to go, and I quote, "destroy 11 all their positions and throw them in the forest where they came from."
12 DRC-OTP-2032-1216 at line 273. The specifics of the attack were 13 communicated to the troops by various commanders, of which one was an 14 officer called Matovu, DRC-OTP-2032-1275.

15 The OTP also relies on UNJHRO reports, but I would draw the 16 Pre-Trial Chamber's close attention to the working methodology of this 17 group which is based on interviews with high-ranking officers of the FDLR 18 enemies, namely, the Mayi-Mayi Kifuafa, DRC-OTP-2016-0023 at 0024, 19 paragraph 6, including a certain General Delphin Mbaenda who was 20 supposedly the target of an attack on Malembe in August 2009, hardly an 21 objective witness. The same report makes extremely oblique reference to 22 a further alleged FDLR attack on Malembe on 15 September, but no mention 23 whatsoever is made of any deaths, merely that gun-shots were fired. And 24 I referred Pre-Trial Chamber to DRC-OTP-2016-0023 at 0026, paragraph 20.
25 That's Malembe.

1 I now turn to the next localities mentioned in the DCC, Ruvundi
2 and Mutakato.

3 For the attack on Ruvundi, the Prosecution in its list of 4 evidence relied on one sentence in the UNJHRO report from December 2009 5 which attributes the reported death of an unidentified civilian to the 6 FDLR, 2014-1192, prefaced by DRC-OTP, at 1193, paragraph 5. No
7 explanation is given. It is a meaningless attribution and in the 8 circumstances totally indefensible since it can't be investigated. The 9 history of FDLR activity which I have detailed up till now shows that the 10 FDLR pursued a strictly military agenda, according to the evidence of 11 course, targeting primarily not the civilian population, as the 12 Prosecution would have it, but enemy strongholds. In the circumstances, 13 no evidential weight should be afforded this claim, that the FDLR made an 14 unlawful attack on Ruvundi, a claim which is not even sourced to a 15 credible information provider.

16 The same may be said for the alleged attack on Mutakato, which is 17 similarly unsourced. Indeed, the UNJHRO report from December states the 18 following for Mutakato, and I quote, and I turn to French:

19 (Interpretation) "Finally, Mutakato village and Musimya village 20 were attacked at the beginning of December 2009."

21 (In English) No mention is made of the slightest physical harm
22 caused to a villager nor later in the same report, DRC-OTP-2014-1195, 23 that is, later in the same report when Mutakato is referred to once more.

24 And to the final locality mentioned in the DCC, Kahole. As for 25 the alleged incident at Kahole in December 2009, the Prosecution in its

1 list of evidence referred us to the UN Group of Experts report,
2 S/2010/596, dated 29th November 2010, to be found at DRC-OTP-2022-2787,
3 relevant page 2825. However, this report makes no mention of any mention
4 of any village called Kahole. Mention is made of an area called Kalole, 5 with an L. So either this is an example of poor drafting or the 6 Prosecution is indeed alleging that an incident took place in a place 7 called Kahole, with an H, in which case, it adduced no evidence in 8 support. Assuming to the Prosecution's credit, however, that they 9 misread their own evidence and we are indeed talking about Kalole, with 10 an L, then the Group of Experts report states that it is not a village 11 but an area which in the DRC can mean a vast geographical expanse. Only 12 one sentence refers to Kalole, with an L, where nine civilians were 13 supposedly executed. No specific allegation, however, is made in this 14 sentence imputing liability to the FDLR. And even if the reference did 15 directly incriminate the FDLR, it is, like many of the other allegations 16 contained in the various human rights reports, unsourced to any 17 verifiable witness.

18 That concludes, your Honours, my analysis of the incidents which 19 occurred at the localities mentioned in the Prosecution's document 20 containing the charges.

21 I can now move on to the mode of liability, but I -- my voice is 22 getting a bit dry and I think I can probably finish this in the afternoon
23 session by 3.30. I am just wondering whether this would be a good point 24 to break. If you would like me to continue, I'm quite happy. I'll just 25 take a big sip of water.

1 (Pre-Trial Chamber confers)

2 MR. KAUFMAN: Maybe I'll continue. Maybe that will be better.

3 I'm at your Honours' disposal.

4 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: No, we were actually going to grant

5 your --

6 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you --

7 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: -- request.

8 MR. KAUFMAN: -- that's very kind.

9 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: And instead of us coming back at half 10 past 2.00, we could all come back at quarter past 2.00. Is that okay?

11 MR. KAUFMAN: That's very good. Thank you very much, 12 Madam President.

13 MR. STEYNBERG: [Overlapping speakers] --

14 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: The session is adjourned until quarter 15 past 2.00.

16 COURT USHER: All rise.

17 Luncheon recess taken at 12.43 p.m.

18 On resuming at 2.18 p.m.

19 (Open session)

20 COURT USHER: All rise. Please be seated.

21 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Good afternoon and welcome to this 22 afternoon session.

23 Mr. Kaufman, you can continue.

24 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you, Madam President, your Honours. Good 25 afternoon.

1 Professor Ambos spoke much this morning about the mode of 2 liability. The benefit of that is that I can considerably cut short my 3 submissions this afternoon. I'd just like to echo one thing that 4 Professor Ambos did say and it's a matter of logic in law, in my 5 submission. Managing a deceitful media campaign, if that is indeed what 6 Mr. Mbarushimana did, which we make no admission in this respect, such a 7 thing is not criminal. And I refer the learned Pre-Trial Chamber to 8 general comment number 34 on Article 19 to the International Covenant on 9 Civil and Political Rights which concerns freedoms of concern and 10 expression. At paragraph 49, the Human Rights Committee expressly states 11 as follows, and let me quote:

12 "Laws that penalise the expression of opinions about historical 13 facts are incompatible with the obligations that the covenant imposes on 14 States Parties in relation to the respect for freedom of opinion and 15 expression. The covenant does not permit general prohibition of 16 expressions of an erroneous opinion or an incorrect interpretation of 17 past events."

18 So the only prima facie criminal purpose in this whole episode 19 was, in my view, the alleged plan to create a humanitarian catastrophe by 20 attacking the civilian population, as your Honours found in the decision 21 issuing the arrest warrant. This mantra creating a humanitarian 22 catastrophe has its origins in an order which was allegedly transmitted 23 from Ignace Murwanashyaka to Sylvestre Mudacumura and thereafter to the 24 FDLR troops in the Kivus. And this order was first referred to in the 25 Group of Experts final report at DRC-OTP-2010-0045. Now, the actual

1 order itself was used by the Prosecution in their submissions and the 2 order is to be found at DRC-OTP-2010-0168.

3 Mr. Court Officer, if you could perhaps display that on the 4 screen whilst I make my submissions because I will make extensive 5 submissions now concerning this particular order.

6 COURT OFFICER: This document will be published and it will be 7 broadcasted outside this courtroom because it's a public document unless 8 otherwise instructed.

9 MR. KAUFMAN: Thank you, Mr. Court Officer. Indeed, we have 10 verified that there is nothing which should not be broadcast on that 11 document.

12 COURT OFFICER: The document as referenced by counsel is 13 available on the screens.

14 MR. KAUFMAN: Now, your Honours, paragraph 93 of the 15 Group of Experts report details a conversation held between an FDLR 16 informant and an FDLR radio operator in the field. This conversation 17 which allegedly took place in March 2009 was heard by the 18 Group of Experts and transcribed. As we see, it was appended to the 19 report as annex 18 and, please, I do ask you to pay close attention to 20 the methodology of the Group of Experts, which in my submission is 21 unreliable.

22 If one looks at this annex, one notices that the title states, 23 and I quote: "Transcript taken down by the Group relating to orders 24 given by General Mudacumura and read out by an FDLR radio operator ..."

25 Yet this is most definitely not what is said at paragraph 93 of

1 the report. At paragraph 93, the name of the person who gave this 2 specific order is not given. What the report, in fact, states at 3 paragraph 93 is that, and I quote:

4 "Dozens of FDLR former combatants have also stated to the Group
5 that orders of this nature must be given by General Mudacumura ..."

6 That is not the same thing as saying that the order at annex 18 7 was, in fact, given by General Mudacumura. Once again, I just ask for 8 caution when considering the rigour of the human rights reports and the 9 Group of Experts reports, something which, in my submission, has caused 10 the Prosecution perhaps to build its case on feet of clay.

11 Let us see what Witness 587, on whom the Prosecution also relies, 12 has to say about this particular order. Although apparently endorsing 13 the claim that Mudacumura gave a general order to burn civilians' houses, 14 what the Prosecution neglects to mention that Witness 587 specified which 15 types of houses Mudacumura desired burnt, namely, those sheltering enemy 16 soldiers. I refer the learned Pre-Trial Chamber to the relevant part of 17 Witness 587's evidence. I think I referred to it perhaps this morning, 18 DRC-OTP-2034-1362 at 1373. Witness 587 takes pains to stress that 19 Mudacumura's order was not to kill civilian people but rather to burn 20 houses, in my submission, which contributed to the enemy's military 21 effort. I quote from line 386:

22 "He," that is, Mudacumura, "said, 'If you saw soldiers of Congo 23 coming from a certain area, that's the area you have to burn ...'"

24 As I've mentioned elsewhere, war is not a nice business. Yet it 25 is an oversimplification to say that the burning of houses is always a

1 war crime, especially when Mudacumura's purely military motives have been 2 established before this Chamber this morning. Indeed, it's the 3 Prosecution's duty and obligation, in my submission, to prove that this 4 was not lawful warfare under the rules of war.

5 Now, this issue is made even more apparent from the next witness 6 on which the Prosecution relies to prove the criminal plan, Witness 632.
7 Although this witness confirms the fact that Mudacumura envisaged the 8 creation of a humanitarian catastrophe by blocking of roads and evicting 9 people from their villages, forcible transfer, if that is what it is, it 10 is not included, this type of crime, forcible transfer, among the crimes 11 with which Mr. Mbarushimana is charged. In any event, as Professor Ambos 12 said this morning, not all humanitarian catastrophes such as drought or 13 famine are criminal.

14 In the present instance, the investigator concerned specifically 15 asked Witness 632 asked how Mudacumura instructed the troops to deal with 16 civilians who were on the side of the enemy. Once again, a Prosecution 17 witness, an incriminating witness, states that Mudacumura's answer was 18 that the civilians shouldn't be killed or victimised, and I cite in 19 support of this DRC-OTP-2034-0361 at 0375.

20 Assuming, however, that Mudacumura did issue an illegal order to 21 target a civilian population per se, the Defence submits - which is 22 denied, of course - the Defence submits that the evidence supporting the 23 allegation that such an order emanated from Ignace Murwanashyaka and 24 thus, by association, within the knowledge of people who might be in 25 Europe, this evidence is extremely weak to say the least. In fact, the 1 only evidence which the Prosecution has to prove such linkage, namely,

2 that Mudacumura was receiving illegal orders from Europe, is the evidence
3 of Witness 552, the person who was questioned about the Group of Experts 4 report and its annex, 18. But Witness 552 does not state that 5 Murwanashyaka demanded that Mudacumura target the civilian population.
6 What he states is that Mudacumura gave an order that developmental work, 7 that is, infrastructure, should be targeted and that these were 8 Mudacumura's words which were done by Murwanashyaka. I use the word 9 "done" because that's what the witness says, is to be found at 10 DRC-OTP-2030-0448, lines 693 to 694.

11 Let me stress that Witness 552 was never asked how he knew that 12 this order originally came from Ignace Murwanashyaka. The witness just 13 states that he knew that Murwanashyaka was the overreaching authority in 14 the FDLR, and as a result he concluded - I say "concluded," not that he 15 knew - he concluded that orders as a matter of course had to come from 16 him. That's the linkage evidence which the Prosecution have. When 17 asked, however, about the interaction between the FOCA military in the 18 Congo and the European hierarchy or leadership, Witness 552 said 19 something very telling. In fact, something crucial insofar as it 20 concerns the European politicians' ability to give orders and to dictate 21 battle strategy, if that's indeed what they were doing, which is denied.
22 And I quote from DRC-OTP-2030-0775, lines 479 to 481, as properly 23 translated into French.

24 I turn to French now and I briefly pause.

25 (Interpretation) "The soldiers do not ask for any order from

1 politicians to carry out any given attack. Soldiers prepare an attack 2 and carry it out, but give a report, or rather, give information to 3 politicians once the action has finished."

4 (In English) I continue in English.

5 It is not clear, however, by any means at all if 6 Ignace Murwanashyaka actually stated that the civilian population should 7 be targeted. In order to impute a criminal state of mind to 8 Ignace Murwanashyaka, one would essentially have to be convinced of the 9 accuracy of an admission which, as we will discover, is third-hand 10 hearsay. This is extremely weak evidence. And if it is the best the 11 Prosecution has, in my submission, the case should definitely not be 12 confirmed.

13 In any event, what the witness actually imputed to 14 Mr. Murwanashyaka is clarified elsewhere at DRC-OTP-2030-0400 at page 15 0406. He says that the order transmitted from Murwanashyaka to the 16 troops via Mudacumura was that the FDLR was to destroy infrastructure, 17 and I quote, "so that civilians are going to shout."

18 The fact that this alleged order came from Ignace Murwanashyaka 19 is something that Witness 552 heard from another Prosecution witness, 20 Witness 564. And for this I refer the Pre-Trial Chamber to 21 DRC-OTP-2030-0405 at lines 156 to 159. Indeed, Witness 552 himself
22 states that the last time he saw Mudacumura was in 2004, 23 DRC-OTP-2030-0445, lines 601 to 602. Much may be said about Witness 552, 24 on whom the Prosecution relies so greatly. 552 is the source, so the 25 Prosecution asserts, for the declaration emanating from

1 Ignace Murwanashyaka that the FDLR would be waging a war against the 2 whole world. But assuming that Ignace even said that - which is 3 denied - it is not what the witness said. A proper translation reveals 4 the fact that Murwanashyaka purportedly warned on the eve of Umoja Wetu
5 that there would be fightings against the FDLR by the whole world, 6 DRC-OTP-2030-0445 at lines 652 to 654. It's in Kinyarwanda, your 7 Honours, and so the translation will have to be checked by the 8 appropriate authorities.

9 Witness 552 even has something to say about Mr. Mbarushimana, who 10 according to him has never been to the Congo and, most importantly, "nor 11 did he have knowledge of attacks before they occurred." Witness 552, a 12 Prosecution witness, an incriminating witness, exculpates
13 Mr. Mbarushimana. I refer you to DRC-OTP-2030-0771.

14 Now I said that Witness 552 heard about this order from 15 Witness 564, but Witness 564 himself was never asked about this specific 16 order emanating purportedly from Murwanashyaka. Indeed, from the 17 interview with Witness 564 conducted by the German intelligence agency, 18 it is quite apparent that Witness 564 never heard an order from 19 Murwanashyaka, but rather assumed or, should I say, speculated that 20 Murwanashyaka would give orders for big military attacks and revenge 21 operations. It's the type of order that he would give, not that he 22 actually heard it being given.

23 What 564 did hear was Mudacumura saying that civilian population
24 who were on the side of the enemy would have to suffer. But at no stage 25 did Witness 564 state that this was at the instigation of 1 Ignace Murwanashyaka. Of course, there is plenty of evidence to 2 contradict the substance of his comments, but when asked to clarify 3 elsewhere, Witness 564 stresses that it was not the general civilian 4 population which was to be targeted - and I do stress this - but rather 5 "those who provide intelligence and spy," DRC-OTP-2030-1199. Witness 564 6 does not state, as the Prosecution would have it, that Mudacumura was 7 advocating the targeting of the civilian population, rather, specific 8 elements who, once again, were contributing to the enemy war effort.

9 Now, I want to continue my analysis of this supposed order to 10 create a humanitarian catastrophe by once more referring to Prosecution 11 Witness 632. He remembers a specific order being communicated to the 12 troops in March 2009 which specifically dealt with the civilian 13 population and the infrastructure. He even remembers the details of the 14 roads which Mudacumura supposedly ordered to be blockaded, as set out in 15 the transcript taken down by the Group of Experts. He also uses the 16 words "humanitarian catastrophe" to indicate the state of affairs which 17 Mudacumura wished to create. When asked what was meant by "humanitarian 18 catastrophe," 632 stated that it meant eviction. However, when asked 19 whether that would mean physically attacking civilians, 632 stated, and 20 as I have already mentioned elsewhere, that Mudacumura gave a specific 21 order that civilians should not be victimised or killed.
22 DRC-OTP-2034-0375, line 476.

23 Now, I could continue analysing this alleged order all day. The 24 Group of Experts is at pains to stress at paragraph 93, as I said, the 25 orders of this nature must be given by General Mudacumura, who in similar

1 circumstances consults with Mr. Murwanashyaka. Now, I have no idea on 2 what basis the GOE, the Group of Experts, concludes that Mudacumura would 3 consult with Ignace Murwanashyaka on these matters because nothing in the 4 Prosecution evidence, in my submission, at any rate supports that 5 contention. Nevertheless, Mr. Mudacumura would -- if Mudacumura would 6 consult with Ignace, it does not necessarily mean that 7 Ignace Murwanashyaka approved or gave the order to attack a certain 8 locality.

9 What is even more bizarre is the fact that despite the continual 10 interception of all of Mr. Murwanashyaka's forms of communication by the 11 German intelligence agency throughout 2008 and 2009, as Mr. Steynberg 12 told you, with thousands of conversations at their disposal, the 13 Prosecution has not produced even one conversation in which Mudacumura 14 was heard seeking Ignace Murwanashyaka's permission for an operation or 15 reporting to Ignace Murwanashyaka the deaths of civilians or receiving 16 from Ignace an order to target civilians.

17 So if this is the case, how did Ignace Murwanashyaka communicate 18 the order which was transcribed by the Group of Experts? Once again, I 19 just do not know. I don't think the Prosecution does either.

20 The order as transcribed by the Group of Experts does not even 21 reflect what the Prosecution knows about the manner in which orders were 22 communicated in the FDLR. I refer the Pre-Trial Chamber to the evidence 23 of Witness 677, whose role has been mentioned previously. He states that 24 all orders received by radio from high command contained the date, time, 25 origin, and reference number. The order transcribed by the 1 Group of Experts contains none of these elements, apart from the month,

2 March.

3 Furthermore, (Expunged) the 4 order in question, he prefaced it with the words "ordre d'avertissement," 5 warning order, order urging care to be taken, caution. This is also 6 lacking from the transcription performed by the Group of Experts, annex 7 18.

8 Finally, crucial, and ever so importantly, when presented with 9 annex 18 to the Group of Experts report, Witness 552 stated that he 10 received this specific order in French. (Expunged)
11 (Expunged)
12 (Expunged)
13 (Expunged). After receiving this order, the divisional commander made it 14 clear - and I'm quoting from his evidence, 552 - that civilians should 15 not unnecessarily be killed and even adding to the order the following 16 words in French, and once again I turn to French just to quote:

17 (Interpretation) "Avoid killing the innocent population."

18 (In English) "Avoid killing the innocent population."

19 DRC-OTP-2030-0466 at line 153 and line 154. There is, of course, 20 one other very important witness who refers to this order, and his 21 evidence commences at item 125 on the Defence list of evidence, 22 Witness 672, whose role I told you about this morning in private session.
23 This individual, in my submission, is the highest-ranking individual in 24 the FDLR to have been interviewed of relevance to this case by the OTP 25 and because of his function he would have well had knowledge of the 1 contents of this order, if it was in fact given. He was also a member of 2 the infamous Steering Committee or comité directeur. He was interviewed 3 over the course of several days and when he failed to provide the goods 4 which the Prosecution sought, he was simply discarded as a potentially 5 exonerating witness. I say "discarded," because if I were the 6 Prosecution and I had taken this evidence, given the seniority of this 7 witness, it would have caused me to reconsider whether it was indeed 8 appropriate to continue with the case.

9 In any event, this witness kept a log-book in which he recorded 10 strategic decisions taken at various high-level FOCA meetings, including, 11 in my submission, the implementation of measures decided upon in comité 12 directeur. This log-book, it's a pink notebook, is to be found at 13 DRC-OTP-2030-0010. And what is most relevant is the entry for the same
14 month as the order which we see transcribed at annex 18, March 2009. I 15 refer your Honours to page 74 of the log-book. The log-book is 16 DRC-OTP-2030-0010 and the relevant page is at 0084.

17 It records the FOCA operational orders, and I quote from this 18 March 2009 entry. Once again I turn to French:

19 (Interpretation) "Maintain good relations with the local 20 population."

21 (In English) "Maintain good relations with the local population."

22 Those were Mudacumura's orders and instructions. How does this 23 conform to the Prosecution theory that Mudacumura and, by implication, 24 Murwanashyaka desired to create a humanitarian catastrophe? It doesn't.
25 That's why the OTP dismissed it and that's why the OTP threw their

1 highest-ranking officer to be interviewed basically in the bin. So much
2 for the criminal order which allegedly emanated from Ignace Murwanashyaka
3 and then was transmitted by Mudacumura to the troops.

4 Let us assume, however, for the sake of argument, that there was 5 indeed a criminal plan to create a humanitarian catastrophe which 6 involved attacking a civilian population. The next question we have to 7 ask ourselves is: When did this criminal escapade come into existence?
8 Well, according to the Prosecution evidence which I have just detailed, 9 the allegedly criminal order on which the Prosecution bases its case, 10 this allegedly criminal order which is the manifestation of the criminal 11 plan, has a date. It was given in March 2009. Indeed, if this is the 12 only evidence of the criminal plan or organisational policy to create a 13 humanitarian catastrophe, then I would suggest that the Prosecution has 14 totally failed to satisfy you of a criminal agreement prior to March 15 2009. In other words, the Prosecution has no evidence to show that the 16 FDLR's alleged involvement in Umoja Wetu or the European leadership by 17 association was the product of organised criminality.

18 But even assuming that in March 2009 a criminal plan was 19 formulated - which we deny - how has the Prosecution proved to you that 20 all the actors in this criminal enterprise agreed on one and the same 21 thing? The Prosecution would like to have you believe that 22 Mr. Mbarushimana was directly communicating with Mudacumura in the Congo.
23 Indeed, in one of the annexes to its list of evidence, I believe annex C, 24 at page 14, there's an entry which documents a seven-minute phone call 25 allegedly between the two of them. But a close inspection of the

1 evidence reveals that the Congolese number here does not belong to 2 someone who's called Mudacumura but to a different entity entirely, 3 namely, an individual by the name of Jean Bosco Abimane, whoever he is.
4 That's referenced by DRC-OTP-2016-0081, a document supplied by the DRC 5 authorities and received from a local telephone provider, Vodacom.

6 In any event and on a more general note, I would just like to add 7 that there is nothing incriminating about the fact that records exist
8 showing that Mudacumura and Mr. Mbarushimana on four or five occasions 9 allegedly communicated with each other. The simple fact remains that 10 before the conclusion is drawn the Prosecution has to prove that the 11 telephone lines in question actually belonged to Mr. Mudacumura, 12 something which it hasn't done. And even if that can be proved, the 13 Prosecution has to show incriminating evidence of incriminating content 14 of these conversations by way of intercept, something which it also 15 hasn't done.

16 I ask, is there one intercepted communication which the 17 Prosecution has presented to you which shows, even on substantial 18 grounds, that Mr. Mbarushimana, Mr. Mudacumura, and Mr. Murwanashyaka 19 ever had a meeting of minds for the purpose of committing a single 20 criminal act? There is nothing of this nature in the evidence. That, I 21 repeat, is why the Prosecution want you to treat this mode of liability 22 as if it were the extended form of Joint Criminal Enterprise or JCE III.
23 But as Professor Kai Ambos told you this morning, it is not that.

24 The Prosecution has to show you that Mr. Mbarushimana's envisaged 25 and desired -- both envisaged and desired the commission of atrocity

1 crimes under the Rome Statute; murder, rape, and all the other sadistic 2 brutalities mentioned in the document containing the charges. This, of 3 course, the Prosecution cannot do.

4 The most the Prosecution can do is point to some loosely phrased
5 press communiqués where Mr. Mbarushimana allegedly predicted on the eve 6 of Umoja Wetu that awful humanitarian consequences would flow from armed 7 conflict. But how is that knowledge of a criminal plan or contribution 8 thereto? In my submission, it is a statement of the obvious. But you 9 don't have to take my word for it. The NGOs have made similar comments
10 and I refer your Honours to the report of the International Crisis Group 11 of 12th May, 2005, to be found at DRC-OTP-2014-0150 -- 0510, I do 12 apologise. And I quote:

13 "If peaceful avenues for disarming the FDLR are exhausted, the 14 only solution left will be a military one. The UN mission in Congo 15 (MONUC) will not undertake this task; the new Congolese army, which will 16 ultimately have to do the job with the UN and other international help in 17 logistics and training, is not yet fully ready but it could make a 18 beginning. While this would likely result in more displacement and 19 deaths of innocent civilians, at least in the short run, letting the 20 problem continue to fester is not an option; it could well provoke 21 another crisis ..."

22 And this is an NGO, actively calling for military action. No
23 difference whatsoever between what is stated here and what is imputed 24 from press communiqués to Mr. Mbarushimana.

25 At no stage did Mr. Mbarushimana state that the FDLR was prepared

1 to engage in armed conflict. He, rather, expressed his view that a 2 military attack on the FDLR would be counter-productive, DRC-OTP-2020 at 3 0504. In almost all of the press communiqués attributed to 4 Mr. Mbarushimana, not only does he not - not - extol the military might 5 of the FDLR, but he actually condemns the use of violence. Let me quote 6 one press communiqué on which the Prosecution relied to prove the 7 contribution of Mr. Mbarushimana to the FDLR war effort. And I cite
8 DRC-OTP-2003-0589.

9 "The FDLR strongly condemns the various wars that have ravaged
10 and still continue to mourn the Great Lakes region of Africa since 1st 11 October 1990 with the attack on Rwanda by the Rwandan Patriotic Front ...
12 and condemn once again in the strongest terms the various wars that have 13 ravaged the Congolese people, particularly the ongoing war in the Eastern 14 Province and in North Kivu."

15 Mr. Mbarushimana's condemnation of violence in the Kivus is a 16 theme which runs like a golden thread through all the press communiqués 17 which are attributed to him. But I don't ask you to rely on 18 Mr. Mbarushimana himself for a character reference. I have a much better 19 authority and guarantee of personality. He is a Prosecution witness 20 brought initially to incriminate Mr. Mbarushimana, an individual of high 21 morals and a man of the cloth, Witness 689, who in his statement to the 22 Defence stated that he got the impression that Mr. Mbarushimana had a 23 genuine concern for humanitarian issues and a genuine desire to seek the 24 path of peace.

25 In fact, there exists very little, if any at all, evidence to

1 connect Mr. Mbarushimana to what was going on in the DRC. Witness 677,
2 as I have stated, participated in the -- sorry, was at least an audio 3 witness to the events at Busurungi in May 2009. And he had the following
4 to say about Mr. Mbarushimana, and I quote, once again from a Prosecution 5 incriminating witness:

6 "Mbarushimana had no influence on the soldiers in the fields. He 7 was in Europe, so soldiers did not consider him important."

8 He adds that when Murwanashyaka was arrested, it wasn't 9 Mr. Mbarushimana who took over, as the Prosecution has alleged so much in 10 the application for an arrest warrant; rather, it was General Rumuli who 11 took control of the FDLR.

12 I'm coming to the end of my submissions. Last subject concerns 13 knowledge and intent and hopefully I will finish within quarter of an 14 hour, 20 minutes.

15 Now, at paragraph 135 of its document containing the charges, the 16 Prosecution asserts that Mr. Mbarushimana knew that the FDLR would commit 17 crimes in the normal course of events. As I would submit and as 18 Professor Kai Ambos stated this morning, that's a distortion of the mode 19 of liability and has been criticised. The Prosecution states that 20 Mr. Mbarushimana knew that the FDLR would commit crimes in the normal 21 course of events because Murwanashyaka and other members of the FDLR were 22 transmitting insider information of FDLR crimes. He also had knowledge 23 of such crimes, that is, Mr. Mbarushimana, so the Prosecution says, from 24 credible sources.

25 So who are these credible sources? Well, Human Rights Watch.

1 The Prosecution also cites three such sources in one of its various lists
2 of evidence. DRC-REG-0002-0819, an e-mail sent to the FDLR secretariat 3 attaching a newspaper clipping reporting allegations made against the 4 FDLR by the UN Office of Humanitarian Affairs. Number 2, 5 DRC-REG-0001-2517, an e-mail sent to the FDLR secretariat attaching 6 another newspaper clipping reporting what Human Rights Watch had 7 published in April of 2009. And the third item on the Prosecution list
8 of evidence, DRC-REG-0002-0314, an e-mail sent to the FDLR secretariat
9 attaching yet another excerpt from a human rights -- sorry, a 10 humanitarian organisation report.

11 Is this not the ultimate irony? The Prosecution relies on Human 12 Rights Watch, sometimes exclusively, to prove attacks on certain isolated 13 villages, and despite the fact that it - that is, the Prosecution - bears 14 the burden of showing that Human Rights Watch allegations are actually 15 true, it is nevertheless prepared to impute to Mr. Mbarushimana a 16 criminal state of mind because he allegedly doesn't accept Human Rights 17 Watch reports as being the gospel truth.

18 Indeed, and as we have shown, given the weak methodology, I would 19 say loose methodology, employed by Human Rights Watch, why should 20 Mr. Mbarushimana have accepted their conclusions as opposed to calling 21 for an international independent inquiry into human rights abuses, as he 22 did time after time in his press communiqués. Yes, Ms. Weiss was 23 correct, he did call for international inquiries. And so, credible 24 sources we've dealt with.

25 What is this mysterious insider information to which

1 Mr. Mbarushimana was privy? This insider information which enhanced his 2 knowledge of FDLR criminality? Well, the Prosecution only cites one
3 document for this and that is DRC-REG-0003-2481. This apparently is a 4 letter accompanying the circulation of a draft of the ordre du jour of 5 comité directeur. From the first line it is clear that the document 6 dates from 2010, especially since it refers to the arrest of 7 Ignace Murwanashyaka and Straton Musoni, albeit there are a lot of 8 numerals and letters apparently referring to documents, but to me, this 9 is complete and utter gibberish. I'm not sure that the Prosecution can 10 make head or tail of it, and that is before they conclude that this is a 11 piece of insider information. It's quite unexplained and totally 12 unfathomable. In any event, as a document which relates to April 2010 or 13 thereabouts, it is completely irrelevant for the purpose of proving 14 Mr. Mbarushimana's knowledge or state of mind at the time pertinent to 15 the document containing the charges.

16 On a final note I would just like to comment on the numerous 17 handwritten notes which the Prosecution has produced to show that 18 Mr. Mbarushimana was receiving information concerning FDLR crimes.
19 First, it has to be proved that these handwritten notes actually are in 20 the handwriting of Mr. Mbarushimana, something which should not be taken 21 for granted, especially in a jurisdiction where the Prosecution does not 22 offer a suspect the opportunity to be interviewed and to set out his 23 version of events and to confirm that that is, in fact, his own 24 handwriting. This is what is done in most normal police forces. They 25 ask for a handwriting sample for the purpose of graphological examination

1 and comparison.

2 In any event, all these notes and e-mails insofar as they may be 3 attributed to Mr. Mbarushimana do nothing more than record allegations
4 published in publicly available sources. There is nothing to suggest 5 that Mr. Mbarushimana was receiving information which was not otherwise 6 available from open sources. And if this was not the case and 7 Mr. Mbarushimana was receiving secret and confidential information, the 8 Prosecution has not proved such even with the tiniest piece of evidence.

9 So that is all the Prosecution can point to in order to show that 10 Mr. Mbarushimana knew of an intent to commit a humanitarian catastrophe 11 in the Kivus or actively desired such.

12 I'll now prove to you the complete opposite and I will use 13 evidence which the Prosecution itself has disclosed as incriminating.
14 According to the Prosecution's document containing the charges at 15 paragraph 133, it is alleged that Mr. Mbarushimana's role as executive 16 secretary of the FDLR made him fully aware of the FDLR's goals and 17 activities. And I quote:

18 "As a member of the Steering Committee," so the DCC continues, 19 "Mbarushimana was in a position to demand information from Mudacumura 20 about the allegations of FDLR responsibility for crimes attributed to the 21 group."

22 And here, your Honours, the Prosecution has hit the nail right on 23 the head. What it states is that all that was being filtered to 24 Mr. Mbarushimana was allegations not actual knowledge of atrocity crimes.
25 And from where does the Prosecution presume that Mr. Mbarushimana had a

1 duty to inquire of Mr. Mudacumura? As Professor Ambos said, 2 Mr. Mbarushimana is not charged with a breach of superior responsibility
3 pursuant to Article 28 of the Rome Statute and he had no duty whatsoever 4 even if he knew of the actual commission of crimes, which he did not.
5 But what is more interesting is that which the Prosecution states at 6 paragraph 117 of the document containing the charges, and I quote: 7 "Mbarushimana's official duties as executive secretary and 8 Steering Committee member required him to engage with the common plan.
9 He performed his functions in accordance with the FDLR Statute and the 10 Règlement d'ordre intérieur and in implementation of the decisions taken 11 during the January 2009 Steering Committee meeting regarding the 12 international media campaign ..."

13 So apparently decisions were taken at this Steering Committee 14 meeting of January 2009 which furthered the criminal plan, according to 15 the Prosecution. Well, we do have a written record of the decisions 16 reached at this meeting. The Prosecution showed it to you and they 17 stressed various paragraphs. I think I remember, if I'm not mistaken, 18 paragraph 36. Well, anyway, it's to be found at DRC-REG-0007-0752 and it 19 was among the documents seized from Mr. Mbarushimana's house. Is this 20 the Prosecution's smoking gun? Is this the star piece of evidence which 21 will clinch the Prosecution's case? Indeed, Mr. Mbarushimana's name does 22 appear as an apparent signatory on the last page of this document. Let 23 us see to what decisions exactly this signature is appended less than two 24 weeks before the outbreak of Umoja Wetu. I refer you to page 3 of the 25 document at the document DRC-REG-0007-0754, paragraph (h), and I turn

1 into French.

2 (Interpretation) "Fight with all energy any forms of abuses or 3 acts of violence against the civilian population."

4 (In English) "Fight with energy all forms of exactions against 5 the civilian population."

6 It seems pretty clear to me that Mr. Mbarushimana was not 7 plotting any form of attack on a civilian population nor any form of 8 humanitarian catastrophe. He was, if we are to believe this as being 9 imputed to him, positively and actively seeking to dissuade any form of 10 mistreatment of the local population in the Kivus.

11 Your Honours, that concludes my presentation. Thank you very 12 much for listening.

13 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you very much, Mr. Kaufman.

14 (Pre-Trial Chamber confers)

15 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: We have come to the end of the Defence 16 presentation of its evidence, and we have one more hour to go. We have 17 decided that we should continue and we'll give the parties 30 minutes 18 each to respond and to reply, starting with the Prosecution.

19 MR. STEYNBERG: Thank you, Madam President, your Honours.

20 My learned friend has analysed in great detail the evidence 21 presented on the Prosecution's list of evidence over the last several 22 hours. It will obviously be impossible in the time available to respond 23 to each and every of his allegations. We will do so in our written 24 reply. I would, however, like to start by addressing the other Defence 25 counsel who spoke this morning, that is, Professor Kai Ambos, and his

1 submissions on the mode of liability, in particular the mode of liability 2 under 25(3)(d).

3 At the outset, your Honours, I should perhaps state that, unlike 4 Dr. Phil Clark, the Prosecution does not dispute the expertise of 5 Professor Ambos, but also unlike Dr. Phil Clark, he is not before the 6 Chamber as an expert witness but as counsel for the Defence, and it is 7 with this in mind that I submit his arguments must be interpreted.
8 Therefore, anecdotes and asides as to what happened in Rome are not 9 evidence before this Chamber and I ask the Chamber to concentrate on the 10 arguments which he presented.

11 How is this Chamber to assess Professor Ambos's arguments? I 12 submit that it's clear from his stated intention of appearing before this 13 Court as well as the impassioned nature of his arguments that he clearly 14 has a point to make and an agenda to reach. And I don't say that in an 15 underhanded way. I don't mean to impute that -- anything underhanded to 16 it obviously, but it's clear that he has a particular vision of 17 Article 25(3)(d) and what it should say and how it should be interpreted 18 and how perhaps his delegation at Rome intended it to be interpreted.
19 But that, with respect, is not the function of this Court. The function 20 of this Court is not to decide what the law should be but to decide what 21 the law is. We are not here to discuss what or to -- to reflect upon 22 what was discussed at Rome, but rather what was decided at Rome. And in 23 my submission, interpretation of Article 25(3)(d) as it now exists does 24 not accord, with respect, in many respects with Professor Ambos's 25 presentation this morning.

1 I obviously will not be able to respond to each and every 2 argument which was raised. We will again do so in our written 3 submissions, but let me highlight a few points with which the Prosecution 4 takes issue with the presentation.

5 And at the outset, perhaps I should just stress that the 6 Prosecution does not, I repeat does not, seek to impute any form of 7 collective responsibility into Article 25(3)(d). The Prosecution alleges 8 that the suspect is liable under Article 25(3)(d) as a result of his 9 individual contribution to the crimes committed by the Common Purpose 10 Group. We do not intend to incorporate any form of joint criminal 11 enterprise nor dolus eventualis doctrine nor any other form of corporate 12 responsibility into the Statute.

13 It seemed that Professor Ambos, counsel for the Defence, may have 14 gained this mistaken impression from the Prosecution's use of the words 15 "common purpose" to describe the mode of liability imposed under 16 Article 25(3)(d). He appears to presume that when the Prosecution uses 17 this term, it intends to convey all that is meant by the term "common 18 purpose" in the ICTY and various other international tribunals where this 19 term is referred to as a term of art. This is not correct, your Honours.
20 The term is merely used as a label - nothing more, nothing less - to 21 describe what is contained in Article 25(3)(d), just as Article 25(3)(a), 22 responsibility is often referred to co-perpetration even though the words 23 themselves do not appear anywhere in that article.

24 Let me be clear then, when the Prosecution refers to the mode of 25 liability of common purpose it means nothing more and nothing less than 1 liability under 25(3)(d).

2 This mis-characterisation of the Prosecution's position is, I
3 submit, symptomatic of learned counsel for the Defence's analysis of both 4 the legal requirements of Article 25(3)(d) and the Prosecution's case
5 theory. And this analysis is, with great respect to the learned 6 professor, in the Prosecution's submission, overly formalistic and out of 7 touch with the realities of the interpretation of law and its application 8 to the facts of a criminal case, as is the function -- or as these 9 functions are performed in the courtroom rather than the halls of 10 academia.

11 Turning to certain other issues I would like to address. First, 12 possibly the most egregious, is what the Prosecution submits to be a 13 fundamental misinterpretation of Article 25(3)(d) and a 14 mis-characterisation of the Prosecution's argument in relation to the 15 application of subsection (d) to persons who are part of the Common 16 Purpose Group or not part of the Common Purpose Group on the other hand.

17 I submit that the Prosecution's case - what has never been the 18 Prosecution's submission - that Article 25(3)(d) applies only to persons 19 who are not part of the Common Purpose Group. It is true my colleague 20 Ms. Solano made the point that it does apply to persons who are not part 21 of the group but it was not intended to imply that conversely it does not 22 apply to persons who are part of the group. Quite simply, 23 Article 25(3)(d) does not specify it one way or the other. And perhaps 24 if one reads through the entire article in one go rather than in little 25 pieces, this will become clear. It criminalises any person -- let me

1 start from the beginning.

2 "A person shall be criminally liable and liable for punishment 3 for a crime within the jurisdiction of the Court if that person in any 4 other way contributes to the commission or attempted commission of such a 5 crime by a group of persons acting with a common purpose."

6 There's no requirement there that he be within the group or 7 without the group. And applying the logic which Professor Ambos raised 8 with respect to another issue, if that limitation had been intended they 9 would have put it in there, but it doesn't appear.

10 So the Prosecution submits that such interpretation is not 11 supported by the plain language of the Statute. Furthermore, it would 12 lead to absurd results. If that were the case, an outsider, a person not 13 part of the group, who is charged under this article could escape 14 liability by getting into the witness box and simply saying: I actually 15 had a meeting of mind with these other people, therefore I'm part of the 16 group, therefore I'm innocent of liability under that crime. In other 17 words, by showing a greater degree of participation, he could in fact 18 escape liability.

19 In my submission, the framers of the Statute must have intended 20 sub-articles (a) and (d) to fit together as a seamless framework which 21 would not allow persons whose conduct satisfies a certain minimum 22 threshold to escape liability based on such a legal artifice.

23 Neither, your Honours, is this interpretation consistent with the 24 jurisprudence of this Court. It is contrary to the decision of this 25 Chamber when it issued the arrest warrant for Mr. Mbarushimana and it is

1 also inconsistent with the decisions in the Darfur I and the Kenya I 2 cases when they issued arrest warrants and summonses respectively in 3 respect of Messrs. Harun and Kushayb, and Ruto, Sang and Ali
4 respectively. In those two cases, Mr. Kushayb and Mr. Sang at least can 5 be described as being part of the group of persons who committed the 6 crime. Nevertheless, the Court found at least reasonable grounds for 7 leave that they could be held liable under 25(3)(d). And the fact that 8 this is not at confirmation hearing merely at arrest warrant stage, in my 9 submission is not that relevant, as this is a legal principle rather than 10 an issue that goes to the threshold of proof.

11 Turning then to the issue of the type of contribution required by 12 Article 25(3)(d). The learned counsel, Professor Ambos, embarks on an 13 interesting exercise of interpretation which culminates in him 14 concluding, if I understand correctly, that the contribution required or 15 the contribution required by Article 25(3)(d) is at least a substantial 16 contribution if not an essential contribution. This interpretation is, 17 with great respect, flawed in several respects.

18 In the first instance, as I understand his argument, he starts by 19 incorporating the ICTY's substantial contribution requirement for aiding 20 and abetting wholesale into Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute. Again, one 21 wonders why if that were the intention of the framers of the Statute with 22 the knowledge of the ICTY jurisprudence, that they did not specifically 23 incorporate the requirement that the contribution must be substantial.
24 And I submit that there are sufficient differences between 25 Article 25(3)(c) and the legislation in the ICTY to make it at least

1 seriously questionable whether this same interpretation would be applied
2 here. In particular, there is a distinctly different subjective element 3 which, in my submission, may have led the framers of the Statute to 4 conclude that the higher objective threshold applied by the Chambers of 5 the ICTY was not necessary under this Statute.

6 Next Professor -- the next step in his logic is to conclude that 7 the same standard of contribution must be applied to 25(3)(d) as to 8 25(3)(c), namely substantial contribution, based on the similarity of the 9 words "otherwise assists" in 25(3)(c), and contributes in any other way 10 respectively -- sorry, in 25(3)(d) respectively. In my submission, these 11 terms cannot be equated. If one reads Article 25(3)(c), it is apparent 12 that the "otherwise assists" is intended to distinguish some residual 13 assistance from the words preceding it, namely, aiding and abetting. So 14 the person must aid, abet, or otherwise assist. Interpreted purposively, 15 on the other hand, Article 25(3)(d), the words "contributes in any other 16 way" are clearly intended to distinguish this subparagraph from the 17 preceding subparagraphs. In other words, the contribution is 18 distinguished from the -- is distinguished, let me emphasise 19 distinguished, from the contributions required in the previous 20 paragraphs, including paragraph 25(3)(c).

21 In light of the clear hierarchical organisation of this section 22 of the Statute, of this article of the Statute, it is clear that the 23 contribution is not only different to the preceding paragraphs, but it 24 also requires a lesser contribution, in my submission. And again, I 25 stress that the Statute does not place any threshold on the contribution

1 required, such as "substantial," et cetera, et cetera. In my submission, 2 all the Court needs to decide is whether, in fact, his acts did as a 3 factual matter contribute to the commission of the crimes.

4 Now, turning then to Professor Ambos's interpretation of the 5 Prosecution's case theory. If the Chamber will bear with me, please.
6 (Prosecution counsel confer)

7 MR. STEYNBERG: I seem to have misplaced my copy of -- it doesn't 8 matter. I seem to have misplaced by document containing the charges.
9 But in at least two places, the DCC actually deals with how the suspect's 10 actions contributed to the crime, and it specifically refers to - I think 11 it's paragraphs 114 and 122 my learned friend is indicating - how his 12 messages of encouragement assisted to combat desertions and to encourage 13 the troops to continue their loyalty to the FDLR corps to follow the FDLR 14 orders.

15 Now, we have obviously explained in more detail than was possible 16 within the limits of the DCC and the page limits there exactly how the 17 Prosecution says the accused contributed towards the commission of the 18 crimes as opposed to the ultimate common goal, which was to regain 19 political power. Professor Ambos in his analysis has attempted to - and 20 I don't have a copy of the neat diagram that he presented - but he has 21 attempted to pigeonhole the FDLR plan into neat little water-tight 22 compartments, which, while convenient as an analysis tool or as a visual 23 aid, does not, in my respectful submission, accurately reflect the 24 reality of the situation as presented by the Prosecution case and as 25 supported by the evidence.

1 The FDLR's goal ultimately, as we've said repeatedly, was to find 2 a way to regain political power. In order to do so, it embarked upon a 3 plan which was in itself fairly complex. And I note that there is an 4 implicit criticism by Professor Ambos that our theory is complex. Well, 5 theories are based on facts and unfortunately the facts are complex. If 6 the facts were more simple, we would have a simpler theory.

7 But the fact is that in order to obtain this goal the FDLR needed 8 to do two things. They needed to create a bargaining chip. If they had 9 one, they wouldn't have had to create one. I've explained in great 10 detail in my last presentation why their backs were against the wall and 11 why they needed to create some sort of leverage which they could use to 12 achieve their ultimate goal, and that leverage was the suffering of the 13 Congolese people. So on the one hand, they needed to create the 14 suffering, and on the other hand, they needed to get the message out to 15 the world at large that people are suffering and that they will continue 16 to suffer unless you give in to our demands.

17 Now, these can't be simply separated into two neat little boxes.
18 They are intimately and symbiotically connected. Without the killing of 19 civilians, no amount of public press releases and speeches by 20 Mr. Mbarushimana would have made a width's difference to the 21 international community. And without Mr. Mbarushimana's publication of 22 the suffering of the Congolese people and his implicit extortive message 23 that it would continue unless their demands were met, the killing of the 24 Congolese people, the raping, the burning of houses, would have been 25 nothing more than simple acts of vengeance, but ultimately purposeless.

1 And in this way, your Honours, both parts of the common plan were 2 interconnected and Mr. Mbarushimana's contribution as the spear-head of 3 the international campaign directly contributed to the continuing 4 commission of the crimes by the FDLR. And let me stress "continuing 5 commission." This is not the case where we have a single crime and we 6 can neatly say, well, this person knew of it before or after, et cetera.
7 We have charged an ongoing course of conduct involving the commission of 8 these horrific crimes over a period of nearly a year. And each, in my 9 submission, each of Mr. Mbarushimana's contributions, press releases, 10 et cetera, contributed directly to the ongoing commission of the crimes 11 that followed for the rest of the year.

12 I trust that is sufficiently clear. If the Chamber will bear 13 with me, please.

14 (Prosecution counsel confer)

15 MR. STEYNBERG: Your Honours, that covers what I wanted to say on 16 the mode of liability. I will deal, perhaps in the closing submissions, 17 in a little bit more detail with my learned friend's submissions on the 18 actual evidence of the Prosecution and in particular with 19 Mr. Mbarushimana's actual contribution. Yes, I think I will end it 20 there. Thank you, your Honours.

21 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you very much, Mr. Steynberg.
22 Mr. Kaufman.

23 MR. KAUFMAN: Madam President, I think I have nothing to add
24 because Professor Ambos has quite amply presented the mode of liability 25 from the Defence perspective. I most certainly do not pretend to be

1 someone who can say it better than Professor Ambos, and I think if 2 Mr. Steynberg has no comments on the Defence presentation of the 3 evidence, then I will certainly call it a day. We, of course, will 4 respond to Mr. Steynberg's comments on the mode of liability in our 5 written submissions. Thank you.

6 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Thank you very much.

7 (Pre-Trial Chamber confers)

8 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: Please give us a few minutes.

9 Thank you very much. We think we have now come to the end of 10 this session. The next batch will continue tomorrow at 9.00 in this 11 courtroom. We -- I don't think we will need more than one and a half 12 hours, about one and a half hours. So we should be through midmorning.
13 Excuse me.

14 (Pre-Trial Chamber confers)

15 PRESIDING JUDGE MONAGENG: And to that extent, the schedule had 16 indicated half -- 20 minutes each for the closing statements of the 17 Prosecution and the Defence. We will be much more flexible tomorrow, 18 maybe 30 minutes for each of you if necessary and then, of course, we 19 will increase the Legal Representatives with a few minutes. Thank you 20 very much.

21 May I take this opportunity to thank all of you, parties, 22 participants, and staff of the Chamber and of the Court, and of course 23 our interpreters and everybody involved in today's hearing. We shall 24 meet you tomorrow at 9.00. Thank you very much.

25 COURT USHER: All rise.

1 The hearing ends at 3.38 p.m.
